Big 3 Split As Soviets Snub 'Plan'

PARIS, July 2—(UP)—The Big Three Foreign Ministers conference broke up in failure Wednesday night when Soviet Russia decided to boycott the Marshall plan for European recovery.

Great Britain and France immediately announced they would go full speed ahead with the plan despite the Soviet decision.

Russian Foreign Minister Molotov in a bitterly angry statement, warned both countries "against the consequences of such action," and implicitly accused the United States of seeking world domination.

British Foreign Minister Bevin, a veteran of the years of rough and tumble in labor union, national and world politics, flushed deep red and, rising from his chair said:

"I regret that Mr. Molotov has threatened that if we continue this beneficent work that we must face the consequences."

"Well, my country has faced grave consequences and threats before. But that is not the sort of prospect which will deter us from what we consider our duty."

"We shall ask all the countries of Europe if they wish to collaborate with us. If there are any that reply in the affirmative, we shall perhaps be able to overcome the accusations which have been made against us by our example as we have not succeeded in overcoming them by our arguments."

Diminutive, dapper French Foreign Minister Bidault rose slowly in his turn and said:

"The French Government feels itself obliged to pursue the studies of Mr. Marshall's proposals with all countries which declare themselves ready to work with it, and in the hope that no refusal will be final and that, with the help of reflection, the work which is handed us will not be the product of an incomplete Europe."

Thus France, definitely, after long seeking to be the balance between East and West, cast her lot with the United States and Britain.

The fateful decisions which made complete the break between East and West were taken at a dramatic 13-hour meeting of the three Foreign Ministers in the Park Hotel Room of the Quai d'Orsay—the French Foreign Office—gaily decorated with tapestries of parquets and other exotic birds.

From the Baltic Sea to the Upper Adriatic, along the Stettin-Trieste line, Europe was divided. One half of it consisted of the Western Democracies and the

Flood Crest Passes Threatened St. Louis

ST. LOUIS, July 2—(UP)—A new flood crest in the mighty Mississippi, on one of the longest rampages in its turbulent history, passed St. Louis Wednesday night and rolled toward two Missouri towns, where levee workers fought to hold back flood waters expected to be the highest on record there.

The river fell slightly and fore-buildings have been destroyed in the area and nearly 12,000 damaged, the Red Cross reported. Some 375,000 acres were inundated.

U. S. engineers moved their forces into Perry County, Mo., to bolster dikes protecting Claryville and McBride, opposite Chester, Ill., where a stage of 38 feet or higher was predicted.

River experts called the situation "critical" at Claryville. They warned that a hundred families remaining in that area would have to be evacuated if the fight to hold the levees appears doomed.

Fourteen thousand Missouri and Illinois residents were listed as homeless in the latest Red Cross survey. The total was 34,812 in Missouri, Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska.

Jan. 1 Cut Provided In Measure

WASHINGTON, July 2—(UP)—Apparently assured of enough votes to override a Presidential veto, House and Senate Republican leaders decided Wednesday to make another attempt to pass an individual income tax reduction bill at this session of Congress.

The new GOP plan is to make the tax cut effective Jan. 1. In other respects the bill is much the same as the one which President Truman vetoed, with the House sustaining his decision by two votes. The previous bill would have been effective Tuesday.

The measure would cut personal income taxes by 10 to 30 percent, for a total of about $4,000,000,000 a year.

It will be considered in both the House and Senate next week. The decision to push the measure at this session was reached by the Republican leaders at a meeting called to draft a legislative program to be considered before Congress adjourns July 25.

Republicans in both Houses have been making a poll to determine whether they now can get the two-thirds votes necessary to override another veto. Their decision to press for action was taken to mean what they believed they had sufficient support.

Several leading Democrats reportedly have changed their stand since the first veto was sustained, on the basis of mail from their constituents. Others are said to be agreeable to going along with the effective date Jan. 1.

Chairman Robert A. Taft, Republican Policy Committee, said the Senate would try to complete action next week, or at least by Monday of the following week.

Asked about the prospect of overriding another veto, he said "the Republican majority is in the decision and the decision made to go ahead. He added that he had not analyzed the poll on the outlook for overriding."

President Truman vetoed the original bill on grounds that it was the "wrong kind" of bill at "the wrong time." He centered his criticism on the fact that it did not give enough relief to the small wage earner as against the higher bracket incomes. He also warned that it would be highly inflationary at this time.

Taft said that in view of the decision on the tax bill, the congressional group decided it would be unwise at this time to add any additional major legislation to the program already set for action. He said the GOP leaders would meet again in about two weeks to consider placing other bills on the schedule.

Sen. Harry F. Byrd, Democrat, Virginia, who opposed the original bill, said he would support it.

Pilot, Down for Beer, Lands Before Bar

BATTLE MOUNTAIN, Nev., July 2—(UP)—The main street of this little Nevada community is no air strip, and no parking place for a pilot who wants a quick beer, Frank Pace learned Wednesday.

Tuesday Pace, an Ely, Nev., private pilot, got thirsty for a beer while flying over Nevada in his light monocoque. Beneath him was an oasis for a thirsty pilot—a Battle Mountain bar.

He glided down out of the sky, landed smack on the main street and taxied up in front of the bar, cut the motor and went inside.

"Gimme a beer," he said. Constable Charles Lemaire arrived minutes later.

"Get that airplane out of the street, you're obstructing traffic." "I can't—I'm out of gas," said the pilot, who said he had changed his mind. He flew off.

But 30 minutes later he was back again, stepped out of his airplane in front of the bar, and went inside.

"Gimme another beer," he said. The constable came back and jailed him.

Pace, lacking $500 bail, remained in jail Wednesday, charged with a gross misdemeanor: "Reckless and careless operation of an airplane on the ground."

CIO Steel Workers To Ignore Labor Board

PITTSBURGH, July 2—(UP)—The CIO-United Steelworkers of America, in Executive-Board action, Wednesday voted not to recognize the new Labor Board to be set up under the Taft-Hartley Law.

The 875,000-member union stated it would seek other means to expedite grievance settlements, bargaining elections and other items that otherwise might come under the powers of the Federal Labor Board.

Other actions taken by the Union's Executive Board were: 1. In future contracts the Union "will not commit itself . . . to non-strike obligations enforceable by harassing law suits."

2. It will follow the international CIO policy, adopted last Friday, of refusing to "comply with unconstitutional limitations on political activity which are written into the Taft-Hartley Bill."

U. S. Has First Surplus in 17 Years

WASHINGTON, July 2—(UP)—A $53,787,660 surplus, he first in 17 years, was chalked up by the Federal Government for the 1947 fiscal year, ended Monday.

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder announced Wednesday that the surplus was applied on the national debt, helping to reduce it to $258,375,903.293 as of Monday midnight.

Turning to the subject of taxes, Snyder told a news conference: "As long as business, employment and national income continue high, we should maintain tax revenues at levels that will permit a continued reduction in the public debt."

The nearly $754,000,000 excess of Government income over spending during the last 12 months was an improvement of better than $21,400,000,000 over the 1946 fiscal year.

Wallace Sees Party's Life Extended by Labor Veto

NEW YORK, July 2—(UP)—Henry A. Wallace said Wednesday President Truman's veto of the Taft-Hartley Labor Bill has prolonged the life of the Democratic Party but "failure of the Democratic Senators to provide the 32 votes necessary to sustain the veto further weakened the party."

Writing in the New Republic Magazine, which he edits, Wallace said the "reactionaries of the South" are seeking to regain control of the Democratic Party, and added that he and some of the party's third party was conceived on the day the Southern Democrats voted to override the Taft-Hartley veto. It was born on the day the Southern reactionaries took over control of the party machinery at the National Democratic Convention in July of 1948.

Brown is a mechanic for Ashworth Brothers Clothing Company, in Atlanta. According to his story, he and his party were traveling back to Atlanta from Jacksonville.

"Our car was an old one," he said, "and I lost control of it and it turned over." Passers-by on the highway saw the accident and came here for an ambulance. At the hospital, physicians said that young Spivey was suffering from a broken leg. The other three injured persons, the physicians said, are suffering from severe bruises and lacerations.

HOT AS FIRECRACKER

Fair Weather Seen for 4th

Guess what? The weather will be hot as a Fourth of July firecracker Friday.

The weatherman, in a thoroughly patriotic mood, has given his word that Georgians may enjoy their favorite out-of-door sports this Independence Day with fair skies and sunshine and temperatures that, although hot, "will not be as hot as they have been."

Assistant Forecaster M. E. Crawford predicts the mercury will stop short of the 90-mark Friday but may go higher over the weekend.

An area of slightly cooler and dry weather moving in from the plain states is responsible for the slight relief from mid-90 mercury. It probably will rain in the mountains during the weekend and be partly cloudy and warmer throughout the rest of the state, the weatherman said.

Wednesday's high was 89, low 69 degrees.

Cotton Textile Industry Soaring In Production and Employment

By WELLINGTON WRIGHT

Georgia's cotton textile industry, which during the war provided jobs for 100,000 people, is still operating at a high rate of production with high employment.

In the past few years, the industry has made a postwar readjustment, the pay rolls of the 200 mills of this industry in Georgia still mount up to $165,000,000 a year as against a prewar pay roll of from $75,000,000 to $80,000,000 a year.

These readjustments have reduced employment and pay rolls only about 10 percent under the peak of the war period.

These facts represent a brief summary of the present condition of this industry in Georgia by T. M. Forbes, Executive Vice President of the Cotton Manufacturers Association of Georgia.

"I am not able to give exact figures on the status of particular situations which have developed in the industry here in Georgia," said Forbes. "But we are going full speed in many lines. Employment still remains high and in some lines production is still at the peak."

To meet the conditions of readjustment, Forbes said that some Georgia mills have found it necessary to reduce their pay rolls.

"They are doing so," he explained, "by following either one of two methods: some are cutting out the third shift and some are cutting back from a 48-hour to a 40-hour week. Others are still running full blast on a 24-hour day with three eight-hour shifts."

Only two branches of the cotton textile industry in Georgia have felt the full effect of postwar readjustment, continued Forbes, and they are the producers of coarse yarns and the producers of heavy cotton duck.

"The collapse of the chenille bedspread industry in North Georgia naturally affected the producers of coarse yarns," Forbes said. "Some of them have had to curtail and two of these mills have closed down completely. Normally, they employ about 300 people."

In addition, there are in Georgia

Sex Crimes On Increase In City Area

By CELESTINE SIBBLE

Sex crime is on the increase in Atlanta.

In the last 60 days, 27 persons have been indicted by the Fulton County Grand Jury for statutory offenses, four of which were serious violations of the law.

Two women have been criminally assaulted and slain.

City policemen, assigned to patrol motionpicture theaters, are dealing with an increasing number of men charged with molesting women and little girls.

The principal of at least one city school sent mimeographed notes to all parents, urging them to warn their children against "accepting candy or other presents from strangers" or climbing into automobiles with anyone they did not know.

Sen. Paul Webb, reporting the indictment of nine persons for criminal assault at a single session of the Grand Jury several weeks ago, said the situation held a "nightmarish quality" for the mothers of Fulton County.

But, according to FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, it is simply the local manifestation of a national trend—the most rapidly increasing type of crime, that perpetrated by degenerate sex offenders.

In an article in the July American magazine, the FBI Director posed the question, "How Safe Is Your Daughter?" and the answer, at least locally, according to Webb, is: "Not as safe as she should be."

The Solicitor General blames the increase of sex crimes on a general moral laxness accompanying the aftermath of the war, on unsupervised freedom of young persons, and on the increasing use of alcohol, and on slums.

Of the 27 persons indicted for sex crimes in the last two months, one was the father of 10 children, charged with incest. Webb said the family of 10 occupied two

Fair Unit To Get Clean Health Bill On Lakewood 'Fiscal' Operations

By HERMAN HANCOCK

The Atlanta government will give the Southeastern Fair Association a clean bill of health regarding its fiscal operation of the 376-acre city-owned Lakewood Park, and will push the creation of an Agricultural and Athletic Authority to develop a vast recreational area on the site when the Association's lease expires in 1949. Mayor Hartsfield proposed the Authority Tuesday.

This was the statement Wednesday of Ald. Lee Evans, Chairman of Council's Parks Committee, which has conducted an exhaustive investigation of operations of Lakewood by the Association.

Evans will file a report at the August meeting of the Parks group, which will be taken to Council for final approval. This will write the final chapter to a recent investigation of the Lakewood operations by the Association.

Evans explained the city was not contemplating a stadium to compete with a proposed stadium planned by Fulton County, but added that if no other stadium had been begun by 1949, the city would proceed with its plans for Lakewood.

"Our proposal is not a civic pipe dream," Hartsfield said. "We are merely preparing for the expiration of the 25-year lease of Lakewood by the Southeastern Fair Association in 1949, and securing

CORA JANE AND TRAGEDY

Country Was Fine-- But Death Lurked

By BILL BORING

Her heart was full of joy as she took Papa's hand to set off for a week in the country.

A whole week with nothing to do but play with her little cousins, take in all of the exciting things of the great out-of-doors: watch the cows grazing in the meadow, hear the little pigs grunt, go barefoot, wade in the cool brook that bubbles along in the glade.

Could anything be better for a little five-year-old city girl who was just out of school?

That was enough to set her heart to overflowing, but there was another big reason for little Cora Jane's joy. Monday she had become the big sister of a little brother.

In Crawford Long Hospital, her mother, Mrs. R. M. Crowley, had given birth to Chester Seaborn Crowley; and both mother and son were doing fine.

That was one reason Papa Crowley had decided to let little Cora Jane have her week in the country. She could stay there until mother returned home.

But tragedy entered the picture. Tuesday afternoon, and only 30 minutes after Crowley had left Cora Jane with Mr. and Mrs. Wright Rose, of Temple, relatives, the child was being rushed to the same hospital in which her mother

REPORT FROM THE COUNTRY

Across Burma . . . To Georgia

By RALPH MCGILL

Bombay was worse than August in Georgia—on a day when there is no breeze and the corn stands motionless in the rows, and there is a heat haze over the pasture, and the dust whirled up by passing cars, hangs heavily in the air, dissolving like heavy brown steam but smelling always of dust.

They went from there to Burma, disappearing into its forests. People at home began to hear of "Merrill's Marauders," but all they knew was that there was the jungle—occasional villages and rice paddies, temples with strange gods, good villages in the hills that hated the Japs, bad villages in the plains that liked them. They played hide and seek with the Japs, going into a village once and eating the dinner cooked for the Japanese.

Their planes hunted them and dropped supplies. Some the Japs got and some the Marauders got. Fever racked them. Japanese rifles took a toll. Dysentery was bad. One shook with chills and steamed with heat in the humid jungles.

It was a long time before they got to Myitkya, and took that vital city, terminus of the rail line from Rangoon. Charles Mansell isn't sure he remembers leaving there. Not so many of the Marauders left, and 15 Chinese divisions were flown in. He remembers being lifted into a plane. When he came to, it was days later in the

Slavs Invite Dr. Newton

Dr. Louie D. Newton, pastor of the Druid Hills Baptist Church has been invited by the Yugoslav government through its embassy in Washington to examine churches and religious worship in that Balkan country but his acceptance will depend upon advice from Secretary of State Marshall.

Dr. Newton said Wednesday night he received the invitation several days ago but would make up his mind after hearing from the State Department.

The invitation, extended to about 10 other churches, would include a tour of churches of all religious denominations in Yugoslavia. Dr. Newton is leaving on the Queen Elizabeth July 17, to attend the seventh World Congress of Baptists in Copenhagen, Denmark.

He said he had "other engagements" in Europe and this trip would not necessarily affect his decision to accept or decline the Yugoslav government's invitation.

DORIS LOCKERMAN

Let's See Now...

Take a tuck in our American propaganda, somebody, quick. It's slipping! We are being sold short on the European market.

Nobody... no lyrical traveler, no stranded refugee, no homesick American... nobody ever told Ernestine Graeb, of Berne, Switzerland, that America had perfected bubble gum.

You can imagine how Ernestine felt this week, strolling down the streets of her beloved native heath, Georgia, feeling happily at home, at last, and meeting a covey of kids with sickly pink bubbles emerging from their mouths... and when she saw a grown woman pop a champion bubble all over her face!

"Well, it was awful," said Miss Graeb, still shocked Wednesday.

Switzerland.
"And it has cost me money!" she said, "because I have to pay taxes in both countries!"

Miss Graeb is the daughter of the former Dena Campbell, of Dublin. Her mother has been vaguely nostalgic for the Southland for 19 years, since the family moved to Europe. None of them has been back. Even Graeb himself, a textile expert attached to the Swiss Government, confesses he would like to come back to Georgia to live if he could find work in his own line.

With such fealty to America, it is not surprising that Ernestine mastered skiing and skating...
(but leans to tennis) nor that she finds the Swiss polka "very tiring." Her patriotism led her to learn four languages—French, Italian, German and Romansch—but prompted her to continue to think in English.

"When I joined the American Legation staff three years ago," said Ernestine, "I simply took it for granted that it was the job for me. It has been! It was hard work during the war, when London, Portugal and Switzerland were the only countries with American Embassies. We processed every kind of desperate inquiry, and still do."

The Swiss-American is visiting her cousins, Mrs. James R. Duncan, and Mrs. T. H. Gardner, both of Atlanta, and will be in Georgia
two months on her "home leave," granted and paid for by the American Diplomatic Service in recognition of her American status.

OVERRUN WITH BUGS
"Robin Hood" the play, is no drama for panty-waists. It is full of fights with quarter staves, swords, arrows, fists, not to mention the extemporaneous slugging words of the Sherwood Forest Gang.

"But," said Miss Edith Russell
Wednesday, "what we really need is a weapon to fight bugs! There is a line in the play which says,
"The forest will overrun us!" Our fear is that the bugs will beat the forest to it."

Miss Russell, determined leader of the Children's Civic Theater, will produce "Robin Hood" as a series of episodes for the TNT (Teen-Age Canteen) in Decatur, opening July 15 at Twin Oaks
Amphitheater in Cooper Park.
Five performances will be given on subsequent Tuesdays.

Driven from the attic of the Decatur Recreation Board by the heat, a dance, and a ping-pong tournament on lower floors, Miss Russell took her young actors to the picnic grounds beside the building for rehearsals. The acoustics were questionable; the light was sporadic. But... the bugs were almost too rustic!

"You have no idea how squeamish a girl can be over a little bug," Miss R. said, "until you hear one scream in the middle of a dramatic line!"

Georgia, according to a dispatch from New York City. The judging took place in Madison Square

Bellinger, one of 24 award win-next year he will be a student at North Fulton High. His winning model is a streamlined car with the engine in the rear. He made the model of plaster of paris.

Last year Eddie won a $100

He also won the regional award of a four-day all-expense trip to he also wins a prize of $100.

The Craftman's Guild is dis-

four expense-free trips to the National Guild Convention in Detroit

$6,857,000 Approved for 'U. S. Voice'

WASHINGTON, July 2.—(AP)—A Senate-House Committee Wednesday approved $6,857,000 for the State Department's "Voice of America" broadcasts after Secretary of State Marshall appealed for larger funds to combat falsehoods and distortions about the United States circulated abroad.

The broadcasts go to Russia and other parts of the world. Sen. Ball, Republican, Minnesota, said the bill is "certain to go through" in both Houses.

Ball said the joint committee approved all the "Voice of America" funds previously voted by the Senate in the annual appropriation for the State Department. He said Senate conferees were forced to cut $1,000,000 from the $13,400,000 total fund which the Senate had approved for other related activities and information program.

Marshall, asking Congress to "lay a firm foundation" under the program, said the Senate-approved $13,400,000 is not enough.

He asked enactment of the House-approved Mundt bill which authorizes a program on a fuller scale.

Marshall told a Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee that the sum voted by the Senate "will certainly not enable the Department to carry on the information activities at a level which our embassies abroad consider to be essential."

The Secretary said he considers "making known the truth about our country" is "a very important factor in the successful conduct of our foreign relations."

Rep. Jarman, Democrat, Alabama, one of the sponsors of the Mundt bill, told the Committee he thinks Congress either ought to authorize a full program or cut off the information service entirely.

While Marshall did not specify which countries are guilty of falsifying or distorting American policies abroad, Rep. Mundt, Republican, South Dakota, author of the bill, charged flatly that the "Russians and others are spreading malicious lies about us every day."

Seconding this assertion, Philip D. Reed, Chairman of the Board of the General Electric Company, said it is worth Russia's time and money to describe America's policies "falsely" abroad, it is worth this country's effort to tell the truth about itself.

The tragic potency of untruth as a breeder of fear and suspicion is no better illustrated than by the extreme importance which Russia and certain of her satellites attach to creating a false and unfriendly impression of America in the minds of the peoples they have attacked or are now attempting to subjugate," Reed said.

L. O. Smith, Valdostan, Seen
For State Education Post

L. O. Smith, Valdosta businessman, is expected to be named to the State Board of Education from the Eighth Congressional District today to succeed Judge W. C. Parker, of Waycross, who died April 6.

Judge Parker's term would have expired Jan. 1, 1953. The Board fills vacancies caused by death or resignation, but appointments to full terms are made by the Governor.

At its meeting at 10 a. m. today in the Senate Office Building, the Board also will pass on a budget for the new fiscal year and will consider adding firefighting training to its present program of vocational education.

The Board last year approved the addition of firefighting to its list of vocational subjects, contingent upon receiving additional Federal funds for vocational education work. These funds have not been granted. Today, consideration will be given to paying for this proposed training for various City and County firemen from State funds.

Appeals from Mrs. Annie Connell Parkerson and H. E. Nelson, who were ousted from their positions as Schools Superintendents of Laurens and DeKalb Counties, respectively, will not be heard today, State Schools Supt. M. D. Collins said.

These appeals have been held up pending action by State Courts.

House Group Okays
Anderson Sugar Bill

WASHINGTON, July 2.—(AP)—The House Agriculture Committee Wednesday approved a bill allocating sugar quotas to domestic and foreign areas as proposed by Secretary of Agriculture Anderson.

The bill now goes to the House for action.

It would replace the 1937 Sugar Quota Act which expires Dec. 31.

A Committee aide said the group approved the bill unanimously with "only two unimportant changes" which he said would not affect the quota distribution proposed by Sec. Anderson and several sectors of the U. S. sugar industry.

The bill would allow each domestic and foreign sugar producing area to sell a fixed amount of sugar in the U. S. market until 1953.

1,503 Warships Lost,
Britain's War Woe

LONDON, July 2.—(UP)—The Admiralty disclosed Wednesday that the Royal Navy, once the mightiest in the world, lost 1,503 vessels totaling about 1,000,000 tons during World War II.

Britain's darkest year at sea was 1942, when Japan's powerful fleet steamed into action in the Pacific and the Germans intensified their U-boat war in the Atlantic. During the year 359 British naval vessels went down.

Mainly because of terrific losses at Dunkerque, 1940 was also a bitter year. The toll was 317 vessels sunk.

CIO Steelworker Union
Studies Taft Labor Law

PITTSBURGH, July 2.—(AP)—Top officials of the CIO's United Steelworkers Union met behind closed doors Wednesday to outline their policy under the Taft-Hartley labor laws.

Legal aspects were outlined by Lee Pressman, CIO General Counsel, but no report on developments was immediately available. International Sec. Treas. David J. McDonald presided in the absence of Pres. Philip Murray, reported ill at home with a cold.

Brazil, Chile Ease
Passport Regulations

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, July 2.—(AP)—Brazil and Chile Wednesday abolished passport requirements between their countries.

Foreign ministers of the two countries signed an accord permitting Brazilian and Chilean citizens free passage between the countries and extending the privilege to citizens of other American nations, including Canada, who have lived in Brazil or Chile for two years.

a hospital. But he remembered the trip. They had gone 1,000 miles on foot, across land they had never seen before, in enemy country all the way. . . . They had killed 2,000 Japs, wounded as many and broken their communi-

But, long before that, he had made up his mind that if he ever got out of it, he would come back to Georgia and the old home place, and take his daddy up on that promise to sell him some land.

He has it now, 53 acres in North Fulton—that region of many small, good farms, where work and planning are remarking the economy of the area.

There is no such thing as an agricultural revolution. There is an evolution. Time was when North Georgia was, by and large, a poor farm section where the rolling hills knew poor cotton patches, some orchards, and plots of corn.

It was in the southern end of the County where the big cotton fields were. That was before the boll weevil. Now North Fulton is the region of many small farms, with grain, corn and cotton and poultry as the basis for an economic and agricultural evolution.

Charles Mansell is an American soldier, out of those hills—back home with two Presidential citations, medals and awards that few men possess. He values them, and the book in the parlor on the table which tells about that 1,000 miles through Burma and the taking of Myitkyina. But, he values most his wife, his child and 53 acres of Georgia land.

Let's look at them. That is not a lot of land. The general opinion is that a living can't be made off that few acres. It is true if the land is poor, and if the owner stays most of the time—at the filling station, or sitting on a goods box at the store—while some tenant who knows his share is going to be non-existent piddles away at it.

But, if the land is good, and if the man will work at making it better, more than a living can come off that many acres. And less.

Forty-two of the acres are in cultivation. He has cleared two since he got home. He does general farming, including some truck stuff. He has two acres of tomatoes, a quarter acre of string beans, two acres of lima beans, four acres of hybrid corn and an acre of watermelons. He has a good, bold creek through his place, and he already has figured out that a dam can be put in, and he can irrigate his truck crops.

He remembers this piece of land where the creek is. Before he went away flash floods used to come in there, and overflow the road. Now that he has planted lespedeza on the hills it never floods, and the ground holds its water supply longer.

Ten acres were in wheat, 10 in oats and lespedeza was sowed in both. He had some crimson clover, and will double crop quite a few acres.

To work these acres he has a tractor and one mule. You will find, especially on the small farms, that the mule still is in high favor. They like the tractors and they use them if they have them. But the small farmer will tell you that for cultivating there is nothing like a mule. The mule lets you make a sort of art of it. Charles Mansell never gets tired behind that mule. He just thinks about those 1,000 miles he walked across Burma, and that makes plowing easy.

He has a food partner. You find, on all successful farms, that it is a partnership. In 1944, after getting out of the hospital, he married Miss Montez Hailey, a young lady from a neighboring farm family whom he long had admired. They don't hire labor on the Mansell farm. They handle it themselves. That's why it is a way of life, and not just a way to make a living. It is going to be a great deal more.

You left that farm feeling good. Reconversion was no problem for him. He knew what he wanted, and more important, he also knew how to do it.

On the way back down the road we stopped at the H. C. Hawkins farm to see two fine 4-H Club boys, Herbert C. Hawkins, Jr. and Richard Hawkins. Both were away from home, but we had a look at their two white-faced beef calves, and they looked good. The two boys also have projects of an acre of corn each.

Herbert Hawkins, Sr., does general-farming, and his wife feeds out 4,000 to 6,000 chickens each year. They, too, do a good job and a successful one. Their farm is just another reason North Fulton looks neat and prosperous; why you seldom see erosion, and why the region generally has a "good" look.

Friday I went to tell about some more of the people who are responsible for the good farming in that region of good people and good farms.

'BOYS, GIRLS OF YEAR'Top Citizens (JS) Here For Citations, Frolic

By ANN WOOD

The leading citizens (junior size) from 28 towns throughout Georgia came to Atlanta Wednesday.

As Boys of the Year and Girls of the Year in their home towns, they came to the Capital City to receive citizenship citations from the Junior Citizenship Section of the Georgia Citizens' Council.

Atlanta's Boy of the Year, Ed Ellis, and Girl of the Year, Harriett Low, played official host and hostess for the 54 out-of-town youngsters, who composed the largest collection of honor graduates, debate winners, teen canteen leaders, Beta Club members, Hi-Y Presidents and young church workers this town ever has seen.

Each town selected its Boy and Girl of the Year on the basis of service to school, church and community. Civic clubs sponsored the contest, and sent the winners to Atlanta for a day's celebration. The "prominent citizens" arrived Wednesday morning and registered at the Biltmore. They were the guests of the Atlanta Restaurant Association for lunch at various restaurants throughout the city.

At a banquet Wednesday night at the Biltmore, the boys and girls were welcomed officially by Mayor Hartsfield and by Harriett Low, Jack Shirley, Boy of the Year, and Douglas, responded for the out-of-town young people.

Dr. Raymond R. Paty, Chancellor of the University System of Georgia, in an address to the outstanding citizens said that "we grown people have magnified the excesses of youth, without paying the corresponding amount of attention to young people who are not delinquent."

Among the Boys and Girls of the Year present are: Margarette Walker, of Patterson; Coleen King, of Ocala; Hugh Hardison, of Cedar-town; Wilma Florence, of Cedar-town; J. P. Collette, of Tifton; Jean Madaris, of Chickamauga; Shirley Chernoff, of Broxton; William Newt Hudson, of Ocala; Robert Harrell, of Cochran; Dr. Ward, of Arlington; Jean Swafford, of Brookhaven; Gwen Gatewood, of Cartersville; Jack Shirley, of Douglas; Mary Louise Reece, of Douglas; Doris Cash, of Rabun Gap; David Harp, of Ashburn; Harriett Low, of Atlanta; Betty Wade, of Cochran; Ramond McLeod, of Albany; Betty Kenyon, of Gainesville; Rebekah Austin, of Smyrna; Douglas, of Chickamauga; Bennie Mae Adair, of Dallas; Charles Boggs, of Dallas; Mary Smith, of Harlem; Jeanne Eberbee, of Ashburn; Jean Justice, of Grantville; Frankie Lee Head, of Brookhaven; Barbara Burke, of Albany; Betty Plyler, of Claxton; Bobby Pafford, of Stockton; Hugh Cunningham, of Arlington; Clifford Bravone, of Patterson; Ed Ellis, of Atlanta; Ray Fulcher, of Harlem; Robert Southwell, of Brookhaven; Jack Shields, of Smyrna; Billy Tipping, Jr., of Claxton, and Bill Kenyon, of Gainesville.

City, and Wednesday afternoon left for a tour of Atlanta. On the tour, the youngsters viewed Stone Mountain and the Cyclorama—a first time for most of them—and roamed through the State Capitol.

HONOR GUESTS—Citizenship citations were awarded "prominent citizens" from 28 towns throughout Georgia, who visited Atlanta Wednesday as the guests of the Junior Citizenship Section of the Georgia Citizens' Council.

The youngsters were named Boy of the Year or Girl of the Year in their own home towns, and were further honored by a round of festivities in Atlanta, including a tour of the city in afternoon, a banquet and a dance at night.

NEWS ABOUT GEORGIA

Compiled From Constitution State News Reports By SAM CLARKE

A bill granting $10,000 to compensate Ralph Stanfield, of Tate, for injuries suffered Jan. 23, 1944, when struck by an Army truck has passed the House in Washington and was forwarded to the Senate. The bill was introduced by Rep. Wood, who submitted a hospital bill of $2,844.

Houston County elected its first woman tax collector, naming Florine Rainey, of Perry, to succeed the late M. E. Akin, who died a month ago.

The Bibb County Board of Commissioners has recommended pensioning "unessential" employees in a measure of reducing expenses in anticipation of a "recession" next year. The Commission, in a letter to all department heads, cited predictions of leading economists and asked that budget be revised downward whenever possible.

Rep. Lanham announced in Washington that he has scheduled the following holiday speeches in Georgia: At Fairmount, Friday; At Douglasville, Saturday; and at Emory University, Atlanta, Monday.

Atlantans were involved in two separate auto accidents at Dalton and Monroe in which two persons were killed. Emile Butler was killed and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Clay were injured when the car in which they were riding was in collision with a truck near Monroe.

All three are Atlantans. A. W. Harris, five-year-old son of Mrs. Nina Harris, of Dalton, died in Memorial Hospital after being struck by an auto driven by an Atlanta Police and the driver, C. O. Van Der Vort, but said no case was made.

The Government has returned to Waycross and Ware County the Army Airport and the buildings on the site. The War County Airport Authority, composed of Cleve Minney, C. L. Harrell, E. Kontz Bennett, R. L. Pittman, L. M. Lipsey and L. E. Bean, will manage the properties.

An election will be held July 15 in Sparta on whether Sunday baseball games and movies will be permitted to continue.

It's Your Sister, Mister
A Carroll County resident chatted with his sister for 30 minutes before recognizing her. Yes, sir, that actually happened to "Little Joe" Robison when his sister, Mrs. Alice Davis, of Dallas, Tex., paid him a surprise visit in Carrollton. Mrs. Davis said she entered her brother's home and talked with him nearly half an hour, but he suddenly exclaimed: "Why, it's Alice." Robison explained that he hadn't seen his sister in 46 years.

Business Briefs
Bids have been requested from three concerns by the Carroll County Water and Light Commission on the 500,000-gallon tank to be erected in the City's Southwest section. . . Building permits in Waycross for the first half of 1947 totaled $26,757 and included 138 dwellings. . . The ground has been broken at the Dasher Bible School, just south of Valdosta, for a Vocational Arts Building. . . Purchase of the Prater Grocery in Marietta has been announced by E. D. Covington who said the new name would be the Six Points Grocery Company.

Names in the News
W. C. Sams has been re-elected Principal of Zebulon High School and William Massengale, of Greenville, has accepted the principalship of the Concord-Molena High School for next year. Pike County Supt. Harold Daniel announced that Curtis Pugh, Baldwin County native and graduate of GMC at Milledgeville, has returned to the college with the rating of Master Sergeant, and will be attached to the military department as an instructor.

Browder Pays $2 Fine For Bronx Track Spitting
NEW YORK, July 2.—Earl Browder, the 56-year-old former Chairman of the Communist Party in the United States, paid a $2 fine Wednesday for spitting on the tracks at an elevated transit station.

He pleaded guilty in Bronx Magistrate's Court. Julius Jarecki, a city transit policeman, said he saw Browder in the act.

JESSIE'S Notebook

Jessie De Both says:
LET'S HAVE A PICNIC! . . .

ONLY THE FAINT-HEARTED are discouraged by ants and sand. To me anything eaten cross-legged on the grass, with a spirited little brook nearby tastes like heaven. But for new picnic-basket delights try: tuna fish seasoned with bottled horse-radish or sliced meat loaf or roast beef spread with mustard. Or moisten chopped apple, celery and nuts with salad dressing for a whole wheat bread sandwich. A lime-butter spread is also refreshing. And so is—Variety!

EASY TO LOVE!
WHEN MY YOUTHFUL friends drop in for tea, I serve them simple food with a party flavor! For my Main Spread I use Blue Bonnet Margarine because they love its country-sweet flavor and so do I! At this time, of course, I think first of Blue Bonnet's easy digestibility. Its high Food-Energy content and its never-varying 15,000 units of Vitamin A per pound. I spread Blue Bonnet on crisp crackers and top with: 1 cup honey, stirred with 3 cup puffed wheat or rice cereal.

As they brown in a moderate oven think how Blue Bonnet gives flavor, nutrition, economy—all three!

A BOON TO YOUNG ARTISTS
YOUR TWO-YEAR-OLD doesn't understand your concern over wall-drawings. He may feel your dismay is directed against his effort, so don't nip a fine, budding talent. Tack a sheet of wrapping paper to a door and let him scrawl on this. But if he has already scrawled on your painted wall with crayon or pencil, get your bottle of Boon Household Cleaner. Determine if it is washable paint by testing a small section inside a closet. If it is, saturate an old Turkish towel or rough cloth with Boon, apply to soiled portion, and let stand a few moments before wiping off. It's wonderful for those grimy finger marks, too. Use Boon full strength, just as it comes from the bottle. No mixing, rinsing or drying is necessary. If children write on linoleum or hardwood floors, Boon does just as effective a job on them. It's safe on the hands and on paint. This fine product is made by the makers of Clorox and sold to you at a thrifty price. Boon is more than a name. It's a description.

PEACHY IDEA FOR BABY
WHEN THE DOCTOR says the "apple of your eye" is ready for a little strain of strained fruits—hell, probably I'd hint right out loud that Gerber's Strained Peaches make a particular hit with the spoon-fed set. Your store should have plenty of this tempting treat, prepared the special Gerber way from selected sun-ripened peaches. Like all Gerber's 18 Strained Foods (carrots to custard) these prize peaches are cooked by steam under pressure to retain precious minerals and vitamins. No wonder more doctors approve Gerber's than any other baby foods. So, soon, spoon up extra delicious, nutritious Gerber's Strained Peaches for baby—straight or as tasty topping for his custard.

OUTDOOR DINING
LUCKY you, if you have a yard for outside dining. Thoughtful you, if you have Pepsi-Cola for a beverage. Since it costs no more than half-a-cent an ounce you can always buy Pepsi-Cola—and for the whole family. Compare Pepsi-Cola with other nationally advertised soft drinks—especially those in 6 to 9 oz. bottles! You'll serve those chilled bottles of Pepsi knowing that by buying Pepsi-Cola you are reducing your cost of living. Whether you have your suppers indoors or out, start with Pepsi-Cola and make these canapés:

3 oz. pkg. soft sharp cheese
1/3 cup drained chili sauce
Mix. Spread on toast triangles.

You've filled 30 ice cubes with cherries and grapefruit juice; set a large platter of cold boiled ham on one shelf. Tucked away 16 bottles of coke and 5 quarts of milk; filled the full width Hydrovator with salad makings for a week or more. Placed cut fruit in bowl of gingerale to chill. Packed 1/2 batch of biscuits dough and 12 boxes of berries bought for next January—for freezing.

Butter, Bacon
Britain Bound

NEW YORK, July 2—(AP)—Lord Inverchapel, the British Ambassador to the United States, frantically hunted butter and bacon on the New York waterfront Wednesday before boarding the Queen Elizabeth bound for food-short Great Britain.

He said he was able to buy 10 pounds of butter and eight pounds of bacon in a shop a short time before the ship sailed with 2,256 passengers. He will spend two months vacationing in the highlands of Scotland.

Legal Poser Arises On Hotel-Apartments

Can Atlanta hotel-apartment houses legally raise "permanent" rent before the hotels have been officially "decontrolled" by the Area Rent Office?

Regional and Area Rent Control Offices answered that topical question Wednesday with a qualified "Yes."

Officials added—"If hotel-apartment owners want to take the risk of a possible treble damage suit later!"

Although Andrew Smith, attorney for the Georgia Hotel Association and the Atlanta Hotel Men's Association, expressed the opinion that "all hotels" were excluded from Federal rent control by the new Housing Rent Act, Regional Rent Director Kenneth Campbell interpreted confusing provisions of the Act differently.

In the face of skyrocketing rents—some have been reported more than 100 percent—Campbell declared National Housing Expediter Frank Creedon had defined a "hotel" as a housing accommodation in which less than 75 percent of the units were "self-contained," that is, housekeeping units rented on other than a day-by-day basis.

"Several Atlanta projects calling themselves 'hotels' are actually nothing more than apartment houses," Campbell said. "Owners and the Rent Control Office itself cannot at this point be sure whether or not they are eligible for decontrol. For that reason, all hotels are required to register on decontrol forms provided at the Area Rent Office. If it turns out that some hotel-apartment houses are not actually qualified for decontrol, rent raises may be illegal."

Area Rent Control Director James L. Taylor, Jr., said Tuesday more than half-a-dozen Atlanta hotels had requested such forms.

Housing Aid Under FHA Extended

The Federal Housing Administration, as the result of new amendments to the National Housing Act, extending and expanding its veterans' housing insurance operations under Title VI, will be able to continue "effective aid to private industry in production of urgently needed housing for World War II veterans."

R. E. Matheson said Wednesday, FHA insurance of veterans' housing mortgages, originally scheduled to end July 1, has been extended to March 31, 1948.

Title VI was added to the National Housing Act as an emergency war measure in March, 1941, with eventual maximum authorization of $3,800,000,000 to insure the financing of war workers' and veteran housing by private industry.

As of May 31, 1947, Matheson reported, FHA had insured or made commitments to insure under this title approximately $2-700,000,000 worth of mortgages financing the construction of around 595,000 permanent new dwelling units for families of war workers and World War II veterans.

During the past six months the Georgia office has been pushing the rental housing program in order to provide apartments for veterans. Fourteen commitments have been issued to date, amounting to $6,179,700 for dwellings to contain 694 units, Matheson said.

F. M. Garner, 89, Upson Citizen, Dies

Francis Marion Garner, 89, of Thomaston, father of Mrs. Eddie G. Dallas, of Atlanta, died early Wednesday at his home, following a lengthy illness.

Funeral services will be held at 3:30 p. m. today at the First Methodist Church in Thomaston, with the Rev. Arthur Gilmore and the Rev. J. W. Windham officiating. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

A native of Mississippi, Mr. Garner came to Thomaston 50 years ago. Until his retirement, he served Upson County in various capacities, including County Commissioner and Sheriff.

He was a member of the Morning Star Lodge 27, F. & A. M., and the First Methodist Church. In addition to Mrs. Dallas, he is survived by another daughter, Miss Odessa Garner, and a son, Dr. J. E. Garner, Sr., both of Thomaston.

Housewife's Special
BUY-LINES • by Nancy Sasser
A Weekly Sponsored Column of Things Advertised and Interesting.

NEW YORK, N. Y., July 3rd—Remember the days when the glorious Fourth was celebrated with the incessant noise of firecrackers and Town Square oratory? Today, our observance may be quieter... but certainly no less sincere. Make Independence Day memorable with a family picnic, or a table bedecked with red, white and blue!

A BARBECUE in the garden's no bother at all if you shop with an eye to emergency meals and always have a can of HORMEL Chili Con Carne handy. Know this chili that's winning friends on all sides simply because it's NOT the "burn your throat" kind, but a "gentler" blend of plump, red chili beans, choice bits of beef... spiced just right! AND good! Ask for a can and serve for luncheon or supper like this:

Put into a casserole, heat... then pop on the cover and bring to the table, along with a huge bowl of mixed salad, and one of those long loaves of French bread, sliced and buttered, and you're ready to go. Buttered in between, on top, and then toasted. Finish off with fruit, crackers and cheese.

Perhaps you're skeptical, having been "burned" by a too-hot chili once; but try HORMEL Chili Con Carne and you'll "taste" what I mean. And if one single complaint's registered, write to me and DOUBLE your purchase price will be refunded.

EVEN IF YOU'RE JUST "FLIRTING" with the idea of buying a new refrigerator, I want to get right in on the ground floor and tell you, for your own sake, to see a FRIGIDAIRE "Cold Wall" first. Inside and outside, it's what every woman wants in a refrigerator. Cooling units are built INSIDE the cabinet walls so that the interior stays EVENLY cold and moist. A Super Freezer Chest stores 35 pounds of frozen foods, and that famous FRIGIDAIRE "Meter-Mixer"... well, I'll let your Frigidaire dealer tell you what a miracle it is... the simplest cold-producing mechanism ever built! So mark this name down for present or future use: a FRIGIDAIRE "Cold Wall." Made by Frigidaire Division of General Motors!

PICNIC TIPS! Planning a picnic in the woods, or a beach party this holiday week-end, are you staying right at home a-vesting and relaxing? Whatever your plans, today's the day to order groceries for the complete week-end. How about ALLSWEET? Got enough to put on the table three meals a day... to make dozens of sandwiches and to bake, broil and cook with? Better bank on using heaps of ALLSWEET for food, indoors or outdoors, will taste twice as good if the delicate, natural flavor of this much-in-demand margarine's evident in the tasting. So add ALLSWEET to your Grocery list and scan these "picnic hints" for other items you might need. Put pats of ALLSWEET in a thermos jug partly filled with cracked ice and water and put in any other foods you want to keep fresh and firm... lettuce leaves, small tomatoes, celery sliced raw carrots. Pack hamburgers or frankfurters in the hamper to roast or grill. Split corn generously with ALLSWEET. Partially bake potatoes at home... finish roasting in the embers of your outdoor fire. When done, put huge hunks of ALLSWEET on top and let it keep down inside and all the way through. And don't forget this: In addition to ALLSWEET's delicate natural flavor, every pound is fortified with at least 15,000 units of Vitamin A, and supplies heaps of food energy!

MOST HOMES need a special "Declaration of Independence" in July for it seems to me that insect "tyranny" is worse than ever! Ants in the pantry, roaches in the cellar or kitchen, moths menacing precious woolsens... and those pesky gnats that buzz around the light fixtures! So let me remind you again that a WESTINGHOUSE BUG BOMB puts a permanent "fix" on insects... killing even those you can't see! All you do is press the plunger. A misty white spray appears and vanishes. It's loosened invisible atoms of SAFE Pyrethrum, in effective combination with DDT... in this cleanest, fastest and SAFER way to kill insect life. Cost of a WESTINGHOUSE BUG BOMB is $2.98... get one for upstairs, one for downstairs. Only WESTINGHOUSE makes this BUG BOMB!

PRETTIED UP YOUR BATH- room with pastel accessories? Then it's apt to have a flower freshness that's as dainty as any room in the house. And I know you'll want it to stay that way... so let me urge you to keep a bottle of NIL handy on the bathroom shelf. It's that odorless deodorant I've been raving about... the product that says "dear" to all types of odors! Spray NIL in air and in bowl... and your bathroom will smell as dainty as it looks ALLWAYS! Buy a bottle at Grocery, Drug or Department Stores... the label shows you how to use it for deodorizing everything from pets to nurseries, tobacco-stale rooms, kitchen, laundry!

Jams and Jellies Like Mother Used to Make!
WANT TO SURPRISE the man of the family and show him how competently you can compete with his mother or grandmother as a jam and jelly-maker? Then here's the formula in a "nutshell." Step No. 1 is to get a package of modern, marvelous SURE-JELL at your Grocery, for this powdered pectin product helps every fruit to jell quickly and jell just right. It makes such tender, sparkling, fruity-in-flavor jams and jellies, you won't hear a word further about the kind "Mother used to make" and don't miss this SURE-JELL recipe you SAVE sugar, since the average SURE-JELL recipe yields one glass more jelly or jam than long-boil recipes with the same amount of sugar! So right there... you're "one up" on his mother's methods! And right in the SURE-JELL box you'll find 65 recipes... one for every fruit or berry in season!

Lyon Rites Set This Afternoon In Roswell

Funeral services for Dr. G. T. Lyon, of Roswell, who died Tuesday at his home, will be held at 3 p. m. today at the Roswell Methodist Church, with the Rev. C. L. Middlebrooks and the Rev. H. A. McNeil officiating. Burial will be in the Methodist Cemetery in Roswell.

Dr. Lyon was graduated from the Atlanta Medical College in 1898, and began medical practice in Roswell. He later moved his offices to Atlanta, where he practiced until his retirement a few years ago.

Dr. Lyon was well known in pharmaceutical circles, having been associated with his sons in the retail drug business in Roswell and Atlanta. He was a trustee of the Roswell Methodist Church, a member of the Fulton County Medical Society, the Roswell Lodge 165, F. & A. M., and a former member of the State Board of Medical Examiners.

He is survived by his wife; two daughters, Mrs. C. C. Foster, of Roswell, and Mrs. A. Conaway, of Atlanta; two sons, Archie T. Lyon and Harry Lyon, of Atlanta, and several grandchildren.

Mrs. Hosmer, Art Teacher, Dies at 57

Mrs. Madeline Flint Hosmer, 57, professor of Art on leave from the University System Center in Atlanta, and wife of Joseph B. Hosmer, industrial economist at the State Engineering Experiment Station in Atlanta, died Wednesday of cancer at her home, 208 Geneva St., Decatur. She had a prolonged illness.

Known as an authority on abstract design, and ceramic design, Mrs. Hosmer, who was born in St. Louis, Mo., was the author of several texts and a history on print handwriting. After settling in Decatur in 1933 she became one of Georgia's best known art teachers. She taught classes for art teachers at the High Museum in Atlanta, and was also associated with the Ceramic Department at Georgia Tech. She later joined the University System, and was former Dean of the Georgia Junior College. At the time of her death she was on leave as a Professor of Art there.

Mrs. Hosmer was also former State Art Chairman for the Georgia Parent-Teacher Association. Survivors include her husband; a daughter, Mrs. Bernard Brenner, with the Associated Press Bureau in Atlanta; her mother, Mrs. J. M. Fenton, of Decatur; five brothers, George M. Flint, of Houston, Tex.; Louis R. Flint, of San Francisco, Calif.; Robert Fenton, of Los Angeles, Calif.; Herbert Fenton, of St. Louis, Mo.; and John Fenton, of Washington, D. C., and a sister, Mrs. T. L. Blakemore, of Toms River, N. J.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2:30 p. m. Saturday in Trinity Chapel, with the Rev. Harry Tisdale officiating. Burial will be in Decatur Cemetery.

SAMUEL C. WILLIAMS Insurance Executive Dies.

S. C. Williams Dies at 73; Insurer

Samuel C. Williams, 73, a life-long resident of Atlanta and President of the Williams, Meyer & Ansley Insurance Agency since it was organized in 1935, died Wednesday at his home after an illness of a year.

Funeral services will be conducted at 4 p. m. Friday in St. Luke's Episcopal Church, with the Rev. J. Milton Richardson officiating. Burial will be in Oakland Cemetery.

Mr. Williams was born at the old family residence, where he died, at 305 Forrest Ave., N. E. He was the son of James Ethelred Williams and Sarah E. Lovejoy Williams, who came to Atlanta from Tennessee in 1851. His father was Atlanta's first Mayor after the War Between the States, serving three terms in 1866, 1867 and 1868.

A graduate of Boys High, Mr. Williams entered the insurance business in the office of Clarence Knowles, also a pioneer Atlantan.

Since 1900 he had been local agent for the National Liberty Insurance Company of New York. He established his own company in 1935.

Mr. Williams also had a prominent athletic career, being a former Southern tennis champion and playing in the National Tennis Championships in Newport, R. I., during his younger days. For three years he was President of the Lawn Tennis Association in Atlanta.

He was a charter member and former Director of the Atlanta Athletic Club, and was a life member of the Ansley Park Golf Club. He was also a member of the Sons of the Veterans of the Confederate Army, and St. Luke's Episcopal Church.

Surviving are two sisters, Mrs. Evert A. Bancker, Sr., and Miss Elizabeth Williams, both of Atlanta, and several nieces and nephews.

J. S. Mavity Dies; Was Tank Expert

James S. Mavity, 45, a salesman for the Henry S. Clark Company, and former regional Service Manager for the Chrysler Corporation here, died in a private hospital Wednesday. His residence was 2249 Virginia Pl., N. E.

Funeral services will be conducted at 10 a. m. Friday at Spring Hill, with the Rev. Vernon S. Broyles, Jr., officiating. Burial will be in West View Cemetery.

Mr. Mavity, who returned to Atlanta nine years ago from Greensboro, N. C., was a liaison engineer during World War II, and was attached to British Army Headquarters in Cairo, Egypt, as an advisor on tanks. Before going to Greensboro he had resided here for several years.

He is survived by his wife; his father, Dr. D. E. Mavity, of Fowler, Ind., and a brother, David Mavity, of White Plains, N. Y.

Mrs. G. T. Thurmond Succumbs Here at 82

Mrs. Julia Ann Thurmond, 82, of 815 Pulliam St., S. W., a resident of Atlanta for 55 years, died Wednesday in a private hospital after an extended illness.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2 p. m. Friday at the chapel of the J. Austin Dillon Company, with the Rev. H. S. Stratton officiating. Burial will be in Sandy Springs Cemetery.

Mrs. Thurmond, who was the widow of George T. Thurmond, is survived by two sons, H. R. Thurmond, of Dallas, Texas; L. C. Thurmond, of Tampa, Fla.; two daughters, Mrs. Blanche R. Roberson, and Mrs. Alline T. Gunn, both of Atlanta, eight grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Trygve Lie 'Deeply Sorry' Of Paris Parley Failure

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., July 2 (UP)—United Nations Secretary-General Trygve Lie said Wednesday he was "deeply sorry" that the Paris Conference on European Reconstruction had failed, but promised that UN would stand by to help.

It appeared unlikely, however, that any European recovery program could be carried on through UN as long as Russia and the western powers failed to agree.

Lie, indicating his anxiety over the trend of East-West relations, gave a statement to his weekly news conference shortly after he read press dispatches on how the Paris conference ended.

"I am deeply sorry to learn that the discussions which have been taking place in Paris concerning the United States proposal for European economic reconstruction have broken up without reaching any agreed conclusion," Lie said.

Coal Accord Reached With Lewis Big Gainer

WASHINGTON, July 2.—(AP)—when the miners' present holiday ends July 8.

After secret conferences in a hotel room, the following announcement was issued:

"Negotiators for Northern commercial coal operators and the captive mines, together with representatives of the United Mine Workers, announce that a tentative agreement in principle has been reached subject to the terms of a written contract and subject to the approval of the parties."

A union official said that these parties produce about one-third of the nation's annual output of 520,000,000 tons of bituminous coal. The captive mines referred to in the statement are mines owned by steel companies, which use the coal in making steel.

The terms of the tentative agreement were not announced but were understood to grant Lewis' full wage demands, and perhaps other concessions.

He asked for a 35-cent hourly pay increase—from $11.85 to $12.20 a day—for one hour's less work each day. Under his plan, the shift would be cut from 9 hours to 8 hours, including the one hour allowed for underground travel at time and one half.

The tentative accord followed conferences between Lewis and representatives of the U. S. Steel Corporation and the Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal Company, the world's largest bituminous commercial producers.

The Northern commercial operators covered by the tentative pact are those from Pennsylvania, Maryland, Northern West Virginia and Ohio.

Not included are operators from Illinois, Indiana, West of the Mississippi and the South.

Lewis, who has been smilingly cheerful as the talks proceeded to a climax, told newsmen that the United Mine Workers' 200-man Policy Committee will meet here at 3 p. m. EST, Saturday, to review the provisions of the proposed contract. In the past the Committee has always approved Lewis' recommendations.

Besides his pay demands, Lewis also asked that the tonnage royalty for the Union Welfare and Retirement Fund be increased from 5 cents to 10 cents. He asked that the Federal mine safety code developed under the contract signed by him more than a year ago with Sec. of Interior Krug also be carried over in contract with the operators.

Return of the more than 2,500 bituminous coal mines to the private owners July 1 precipitated the contract crisis. The Government agreement for operating the mines under Federal seizure also ran out July 1. Without a contract, the miners traditionally do not work.

All of the Northern and Western operators who started out in May to negotiate together signified their willingness to grant the Lewis wage and hour demand in full, industry representative told newsmen privately. However, Lewis then refused to budge on his side demands, insisting that the operators grant those, too.

The Southern coal producers, representing 25 percent of the national output, have insisted on negotiating alone, and they face almost certain shutdown next week unless they alter drastically the contract offers they made to Lewis in their negotiations.

Pres. Benjamin F. Fairless of the U. S. Steel Corporation and Pres. George M. Humphreys of the Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal Company have insisted on negotiating and bowed to his wage-hour request, other operators disclosed.

This week there was a move to grant Lewis even greater contract concessions. Steel and Pittsburgh Consolidation reportedly took the lead in this move—presumably because of the critical need for steel, and therefore the coal to make steel with, and the Pittsburgh Company's advantageous position in the commercial field.

Some of the other Northern and Western operators balked at granting any more concessions to Lewis, but the Northern and Western captive mine representatives finally went in agreeing to his demands remained to be seen on publication of the terms.

gia eight or 10 mills which produce heavy cotton duck. Naturally, when the Government threw tremendous quantities of surplus goods on the market, these mills had to curtail operations. They cannot get back to normal production until the demand balances the supply.

"During the war, due to excessive demand, the profits in the chenille industry were enormous. As a result, hundreds of new factories started up. Now, in the time of readjustment, the marginal producers in the chenille industry are going out of business. Upon completion of that process, the production of chenille will start up again and that, of course, will tend to put the production of coarse yarns back to normal.

Forbes said in many mills the producers were able to adjust their machinery to make coarse yarns to finer yarns for which there is still a big demand. The mills which have closed down, he said, were those mills where the producers could not change over the machines to finer production.

Many of Georgia's cotton mills make cloth, towels and tire-cord.

"These mills," Forbes explained, "are still pinning their production to the limit. There is still a great demand for toweling and grey goods and the 10 or 12 tire-cord plants in Georgia are absolutely saturated with the demand."

Wages in the cotton textile industry in Georgia, Forbes continued, are at an all-time high.

"They are from 115 to 125 percent over pre-war levels," he said, "and they compare favorably with other industrial wage scales throughout the East."

Georgia mills are still consuming cotton at the rate of about 2,000,000 bales a year, Forbes said, "and about half of it comes from outside the State. In May, 1947, for example, Georgia mills used 172,921 bales of cotton. The cotton which they use is doubtless the best in the world."

On account of the high price of cotton, Forbes said, the mills in Georgia are experimenting with other fibers—rayon, nylon and wool.

"We are trying to use less cotton," he said, "and about half of it comes from outside the State. In May, 1947, for example, Georgia mills used 172,921 bales of cotton. The cotton which they use is doubtless the best in the world."

and her new brother were confined.

The girl had gone down to the pasture with Sonya and Laverne, daughters of the Roses. Just as she approached a workshed, a blazing can of gasoline landed in her path.

It had been tossed from a window by a workman. He was unaware of the approach of the children. The can caught fire from sparks flying from the sharpening of a plow on a grindstone.

Cora Jane was fatally burned. She died Wednesday.

Funeral services will be held Friday in the Druid Hills Methodist Church at an hour to be announced later. Burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery.

Surviving besides the parents and the newborn brother is another brother, Whitley Crowley, 10. The Crowleys live at 969 Austin Ave., N. E. Crowley is an interior decorator.

gers who had been working unceasingly for a week.

At East St. Louis, north of there, several inches of water covered Front Street, near the Illinois approach to Eads Bridge, one on only four highway spans remaining open in the St. Louis area.

North of Chester, 100 residents of Kaskaskia Island dared the raging river to its worst to their island circling levee and refused all offers of boat rides to safety.

Thirty miles below Chester water that rose two feet in one hour threatened Grand Tower, Ill., and the Coast Guard was evacuating the 1,000 residents. Townspeople had abandoned nearby Gorham, whose main street was buried under three feet of water.

Damage in the St. Louis area alone was estimated at $1,000,000, including $400,000 in St. Louis County bottomland, ravaged by the now receding Missouri River.

The Mississippi was rising again upstream with a new crest forecast Wednesday night at Grafton, just below the mouth of the Illinois River.

However, River Forecaster Arthur A. Rutch said that, barring heavy rainfall, the new rise would merely prolong the flood, at its highest level here since 1844. Skies were clear and fair weather was indicated.

Residents of Hartford, Ill., near the confluence of the Missouri and Mississippi, were putting up a valiant fight to strengthen a "home-made" levee, piling it high with sandbags to keep out the river already a foot higher than the town.

Only one major, man-made levee was intact along a 100-mile stretch South of St. Louis. That was the long 46-foot high-dike holding the river back from 200,000 residents of the industrialized East St. Louis-Granite City area opposite St. Louis.

A constant patrol was maintained along the embankment as seepage from it drew near the Eads Bridge approach.

legal means for operating and developing Lakewood Park by a group of citizens along the same lines as those employed by Atlanta Housing Authority and the Fulton-DeKalb County Hospital Authority.

Evans reported to a meeting of the Parks Committee that the only salary now being paid officers or Directors of the Fair Association goes to Mike Benton, President, who receives 30 percent of the profits. He also said the "rides" and many of the other concessions operate on a percentage basis with the Association getting from 20 to 40 percent of the gross receipts.

Evans said he objected to the Association's lease of fair buildings for automobile auctions, but added that arrangement appeared to be a sound business transaction. Benton is guaranteed a salary of $10,000 and gets a percent of the net profits before taxes and depreciation deductions, but the income is limited to $30,000 annually, a figure he is reported to have drawn last year.

The Association also collects about $5,000 in rents from houses located on the Lakewood property, but not used for fair operations.

B. B. Boatner, 76, Dies; Was Retired Groceryman

B. B. Boatner, 76, a retired groceryman, died Wednesday at his residence, 102 Gaines Ave., College Park, after an illness of several months.

Funeral arrangements will be announced by Howard L. Carmichael & Sons.

Mr. Boatner, who had been a resident of Atlanta 20 years, is survived by his wife; two daughters, Mrs. Roy Morris and Mrs. Quincey Joiner, both of College Park; a son, Fred L. Boatner, of College Park; a brother, L. A. Boatner, of Locust Grove; six grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Investigate Cell Death

Fulton County police are investigating the death of William Rudisill, Negro, of 504 Tatnall St., S. W., in a cell Wednesday in Fulton Tower where he was held on a lunacy warrant. Police Capt. W. L. rooms in a crowded, desolate, close-to-town area. A 14-year-old daughter, who previously had been assaulted by a friend of her brother's, was the victim in that case.

The Solicitor General offers as a primary remedy of the increase in sex crimes, retention of medical and psychiatric examiners to assist the courts in handling the cases of sex offenders.

He cited a case two years ago where a sex criminal had been treated by a psychiatrist under court direction and had been cured of his criminal perversion.

"Fortunately, his family was able to pay for this treatment," Webb said. "In most cases the offender cannot afford to pay. Society, in my opinion, would be well served if such treatment were furnished at public expense. But I agree with Hoover that no sex offender should not be probationed until a board of examiners, after due observation, examination and consultation, declares him a safe subject for release."

The Solicitor General also urged parents to "care where your children go." A "more intelligent social life for young people" would remove much of the danger to the youngsters, Webb said.

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief
Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acid out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day. When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's gives happy relief and will help the 16 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

TAX CUTS?

GOP tax reduction bill, has thrown his support behind the new one. He believes it is assured of 61 votes in the Senate, where 33 or 64 may be needed to override a veto.

Taft was questioned particularly about action on bills to increase the national minimum wage and to allow veterans to cash terminal leave bonds. He said the House was going ahead with those bills and that no decision had been made as yet on Senate action.

Congress recorded these developments during the day.

HEALTH—The Justice Department was asked to proceed against six Federal agencies accused by the House Expenditures Committee of illegal "propaganda activities" in behalf of compulsory health insurance. The Committee reported that key personnel of the agencies planned to set up a "hidden workshop" in strategic areas "for propagandizing farm and labor leaders to build up an artificial, federally-stimulated health bill." President Truman has asked Congress for health insurance legislation.

ECONOMICS—Pres. Millard D. Brown of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association told a joint Congressional Committee that "all Europe is operating under close controls and those socialist practices are not operating successfully." He urged that prices be allowed to fluctuate "according to supply and demand."

Tax Cuts Yet Forthcoming?

New hope for tax reduction was offered citizens of the United States Wednesday when the Republican high command in the national House and Senate loaded their heavy guns for another broadside against current individual income regulations.

The new measure, under study of GOP leaders, would make reductions effective Jan. 1. President Truman, voicing acid criticism against an earlier measure, sponsored by the GOP, and passed by both houses, vetoed that act. His veto was upheld in the House by a two-vote margin.

Decision of the Republicans to attempt to ram another tax cut bill through to enactment in the face of the President's action is indicative that they are confident of power to override another veto.

For our part, we think the new effort very much in order and are highly dubious that the President would veto a new bill.

One of his principal objections to the previous legislation was that it became effective immediately. The currently projected reduction could not possibly be effectuated before the first of next year. This, rather than midway, is the logical time to inaugurate new tax schedules and, by passing legislation providing them thus far in advance, the Treasury Department would have ample time to prepare and send out new pay-roll deduction tables. Moreover, by putting the revised schedules in effect the first of the year, the necessity for rebates would be eliminated, saving the Government the trouble and expense of writing and mailing several million checks.

Again, the President should be glad to sign a tax-reduction bill now because otherwise he is sure to be accused of waiting until next year to capitalize on its political effect.

Republicans are reportedly endeavoring to win the support of some previously recalcitrant Senate Democrats by agreeing to incorporate in the new measure community property provisions allowing residents of all States to file joint family returns. This would result in considerable saving to citizens of States where this privilege now is denied.

It has been our opinion all along that such a reform was indicated in any new tax law. It is manifestly unfair that residents of States having community property laws should pay relatively less taxes than those of others.

It is interesting, incidentally, to note that the Michigan Legislature this week enacted the Community Property Act, that State thus becoming the thirteenth to benefit by its provisions. This law, which permits husband and wife to share their income and file a lower joint return, will save Michigan taxpayers an estimated $100,000,000 annually.

While the Georgia savings naturally would not be as high as the Michigan figure, it would still be a sizable amount, more than enough, in normal times, to warrant calling a special session of the Legislature to secure.

But the quickest and most logical method of obtaining the benefit for Georgians, as well as for residents of the other States now discriminated against, is for Congress to pass a new tax act—effective Jan. 1, 1948—in which a nation-wide community property provision is included.

A Tribute to the Alsops

Our readers might be interested to know that Joseph and Stewart Alsop, whose columns frequently appear on these pages, have been criticized severely by Izvestia, official Soviet publication, for depicting Russia as a threat to the United States and the rest of the world.

Izvestia characterized the Alsop brothers' writings as "delirium which could originate only in some hopelessly sick brain..." The Moscow publication went on to say that the columnists were attempting to justify making permanent the U. S. military bases in Iceland, Greenland and the Azores.

As a man is known by the company he keeps, so is a writer known by the critics he inspires. To our mind no greater tribute could be paid the Alsop brothers than the expressed displeasure of Izvestia.

Negro Policemen Succeed in Savannah

It affords some consolation to the much-abused South that periodicals in other sections, in the majority of instances, are as eager to praise our progress as to decry our provincialism.

The New York Times, for example, a recognized leader in the journalistic field, frequently commends editorially developments indicative of progress in this area. Thus a recent issue takes note of the fact that nine Negro patrolmen have been added to the Savannah police force.

"There are political reasons for this reform," comments the Times. "Negroes cast about one-third of the vote in the last municipal election. John N. Popham reports to this newspaper from Savannah that even many supporters of the late Governor's son, Herman Talmadge, feel that no white primary measure can be drawn that will be upheld by the Federal Courts and that Negro voting in primary elections must be taken into consideration for the future." But politics is not the whole story. White citizens of Savannah have wanted to right the obvious injustices under which their Negro fellow citizens labor. The new Negro policemen were trained by white officers who instilled in them a sense of their peculiar responsibility, to the public and to their own race. In the six weeks they have served they have made a good record. They may be pioneers in a Southern-inspired, Southern-supported reform which will bring a great improvement in interracial relations."

The success of the Savannah experiment should not have been startling. Other Southern cities have made good use of Negro policemen for years. Indeed, it should be a matter of some humiliation to those of us who think of Atlanta as the leader in the South's parade of progress that it has allowed so many other municipalities to take the step beforehand.

Negro policemen, properly trained before being stationed in all-Negro neighborhoods, are preventing crime and saving money in numerous Southern cities. How much longer will Atlanta allow its shortsightedness to put off this long-indicated reform?

Farm Stories

Editor: Constitution: This is a note to tell you how much I have enjoyed your farm four stories and what a fine job I think you are doing in writing them. To the newcomer Georgia's opportunities in progressive agriculture are breath-taking. Your series seems to me to be of invaluable aid in making those opportunities graphic and in pointing the way. While I'm at it, let me save a stamp and impulse by telling you what a good job your reporter did on the slum clearance story the other day. In my opinion the easiest, cheapest, and most immediately effective method that can be pursued is the Baltimore team method. It looks like we might be really on the way on that.

Biased View

Editor: Constitution: In today's "Pulse of the Public," Mr. Witherspoon Dodge, who is "nothing if not critical," takes the Constitution severely to task for alleged inconsistency in condemning the infamous FEPC bill and, at the same time, giving temperate editorial approval to the Taft-Hartley labor bill, recently passed by Congress over the ill-considered veto of the President.

It may be that because of his once close affiliation with the CIO the censorious gentleman's views

The Constitution welcomes letters on either side of any subject. They should not exceed 200 words and must be signed, although names will be withheld on request. We regret none can be returned.

in matters affecting organized labor are unconsciously colored, but be that as it may, his bias in this instance "in character too gross is writ" in his labored effusion.

W. D. TUTT, Elberton, Ga.

Daniels and Confucius

Editor: Constitution: Quotes from two thinkers: Josephus Daniels (at Warm Springs): "We need not be the captives of our fear. Our powers are not weapons, but tools with which to build our democracy into the purposes of mankind. We have more to give than to guard." Confucius: "With righteousness in the heart, there will be beauty in the character. With beauty in the character, there will be harmony in the home. With harmony in the home, there will be order in the nation. With order in the nation, there will be peace in the world."

If all would think and live according to above quotes, worldwide conditions would not be as they are now.

JOHN D. WEBB, Atlanta.

Whose Ox?

Editor: Constitution: The Taft-Hartley Labor Act is a perfect illustration of the inconsistency and hypocrisy of the Republican Party and their Southern Republican compatriots. Both of them have been shouting to high heaven to remove all Government controls, eliminate curbs on the business man and farmer, and stop a bureaucracy in Washington from telling industry and agriculture what they had to do.

They wanted "free enterprise"—especially freedom for the business man to run his affairs without any kind of Government regulation. But they have no hesitation in using the Government as a tool to tell free labor what it can do and what it cannot do. This again proves the truth of an old proverb, "It all depends on whose ox is gored." More important still, it constitutes a new test of Abraham Lincoln's wise statement, "This country cannot remain half-free, half-slave."

TRUMAN T. HENDERSON, Rome.

(Editor's note: Bureaucracy in Washington has been telling business and industry what to do for many years. Labor never voiced any objection to that. But, as Reader Henderson says, it depends on whose ox is being gored.)

RALPH MCGILL

Our Three Most Valuable Citizens

Three of the South's most valuable citizens are Deputy Sheriff Russell Lambert, of Carroll County; Police Chief Rada Threadgill and Night Policeman Joe McClarty, of Carrollton, Ga.

They have served their state and region in a manner which is worth a dozen promotion and advertising jobs for which some citizen gets a silver mug and a scroll to frame on his wall.

These three men stood up to a cowardly mob late Monday night that had come to the Carrollton jail to lynch a Negro who claimed that while hunting he had accidentally shot a white man.

Mobs are cowardly, because they act as a mob. It does not mean they are not dangerous. Had there been anything but the usually vicious cowardly men in the mob they would not have been stopped by three brave men.

And Officers Lambert, Threadgill and McClarty are brave men.

Spirit They risked their lives by facing the ugly little cowards who, banded together, were willing to kill a helpless man but backed down before three brave men. Had they, the mob, been boozed up enough, or urged on by some crazed person in the crowd, they would have swept over the three brave officers.

But they backed down before manhood and a sense of moral duty. And, back of the manhood was something else—the spirit of Carrollton itself. It is a city that is the site of a good school which has presented problems of the day before the people for discussion. It is a city that has been the center of a campaign to put into the county playgrounds, libraries, health clinics, and one which takes a lot of pride in it.

County It is the county seat of a county which is basically cotton and yet, when cotton ceased to be king, did not wither and die and become bitter and resentful. Instead, it met the emergency with planning and co-operation. It became even more prosperous than it had ever been in the days when cotton was king. It did not become, as other cotton counties did, a sick county with abandoned land and houses empty and falling in upon themselves. It became one of the finest counties in the state with more farm owners than most counties have.

It is a county where young Dick Flynn, the Presbyterian minister who served abroad as a chaplain, and who has never been afraid to stand up and preach the real meaning of Christianity, is representative of the best religious thinking of the city, Baptist, Methodist and all the others as well.

Support Officers Lambert, Threadgill and McClarty may not have realized it, but all this was behind them when they stood up with their guns and backed down an ugly, cruel and hateful mob.

Such things, which seem so intangible, which often are the butt of cynical laughter, all have a very real value. Carroll County and Carrollton are simply places where the true values are too high to allow a mob to do its slimy wish. And that was not always true.

The Law We never quite realize how much it is we live by the law. The Boston police strike of 1919 saw looters and criminals take over the city, fighting even the militia. Every time a great disaster comes by flood or fire we are shocked to learn that the basic beast in man comes out and that dead bodies are looted of their money and jewelry. It was true in the great San Francisco fire as it was true in Atlanta's Winecoff fire disaster.

Once violence is allowed to go unpunished; once it is allowed to lynch without legal action against the guilty, then violence takes on a sort of authority.

All the whining excuses—of Northern interference, of gang murders in the North, are not valid. They are the excuses of cowards, of moral and spiritual cowards.

Crime Lynching is not mere murder and there is little comparison ahead of the searching law, or it takes him from the law, and then executes, or seeks to execute, the victim. It thus serves as jury, judge and executioner. It defies the law under which we live. It looses the beast which would like to prey, not on a frightened Negro or white man, but on all men.

There are those who know the guilty in the brutal blood-lust lynch murders in Walton County who must even now be struggling with their real selves and who will one day come forth and say: "I am a Christian and a person who hates evil, and I want to tell what I know."

That affront to the law leaves us all in danger.

Men I do not know Officers Lambert, Threadgill and McClarty. I am reasonably sure they are the men by the mob, the mob of their friends as anyone else. We may be sure they hated the Negro who claimed to have killed by accident, but whose subsequent actions did not so indicate. We may be sure that their personal inclinations were to let the mob have him.

But they were men. And they proved they were not ordinary men. They proved they were big men, and men with courage.

They were true to their oath, and therefore true to themselves. They can look their families and their fellowmen in the eye and not feel like a miserable wretch inside, as the members of the mob that killed just inside Walton County cannot feel.

I cannot think of a Georgia man who has served the South and the State so well as these three men—Deputy Sheriff Russell Lambert, Police Chief Rada Threadgill and Night Policeman McClarty.

Their moral sense of duty was great enough to permit them to act like the men the crisis required. We will stop lynching when the moral sense of other officers, of juries, of citizens with information, and the moral sense of public opinion is as strong as theirs.

We live by the law. If we fail the law, then we will live in fear and under the threat of those to whom we have given the authority of violence.

The law must rule.

'I Remember When---' Knows No Ending

The first showing of a motion picture for an admission charge was in Atlanta. At the Cotton States Exposition. At least, that is according to Dr. T. K. Peters, who came into this office one day last week on totally different business and remained to reminiscence concerning the early days of the movies.

(Dr. Peters is now public relations and finance officer for Boys' Estate, a great youth rehabilitation project near Brunswick. See yesterday's column.)

According to the doc, some fellow brought a couple of immature projection machines and set up a picture show adjoining another attraction known as "The Old Plantation" at the Cotton States Exposition in Piedmont Park. "The Old Plantation" caught fire, burned down and destroyed, also, its neighbor, the picture show. So the pioneer screen showman took his remaining projector to New York, where Edison got hold of it and used it as the basis for his later perfected invention. At least that's the story.

"Travelogues" Dr. Peters covered quite a lot of this old globe when he was young and when the motion picture was still in swaddling clothes. He took those pictures called "travelogues," which were so popular in the days of the nickelodeon and the illustrated song. He made a travelogue of the Panama Canal, for instance, not too long after it was building. He still owns a lot of the old equipment and a lot of the films exposed in those days. Some of his stuff, I'd guess, might be interesting for some museum of the screen.

He worked for an outfit we used to know as Lubin. It was about the same time I was enjoying my brief experience in the operating of a picture theater. I was a pioneer in one city. My nickelodeon was the first to break tradition and charge 10 cents, instead of a nickel, admission. It was, of course, for a super dud of a film, "Rip Van Winkle." Running time, 25 minutes. With an illustrated song, shown over in 30 minutes. We debated for three days, with much trepidation, before announcing the 10-cent admission. But we packed 'em in, even at that swollen charge.

Realism Doc Peters recalled theaters built in the form of Pullman cars, some specializing in travelogue films. Audiences sat facing one end of the coach, the "observation platform." The entire coach rocked to simulate motion of a train and, looking at the screen beyond the "observation," the film was like the passing scenery from a real train.

He was, for years, the movies' expert on trick photography. When you saw entire cities rising out of a small wooden box, for instance, it was probably Doc who arranged the double-exposure that was the foundation of the trick.

Do any of you oldtimers recall the scene in DeMille's old classic of the silent screen, "The Ten Commandments," when the Red Sea divided so the Children of Israel could walk across the sea's bed in safety while the pursuing Egyptians were caught in the waters? Doc Peters did that stunt. He explained last week how it was done. An arrangement of nine-foot steel frameworks, covered with plaster of Paris molded and dried in the shape of ocean waves. The whole thing covered with gelatin, set hard over the plaster of Paris base. Then team jets fixed underneath made the gelatin melt and flow together, between the two frames. This they photographed for the reemerging of the waters after the Israelites had passed over. For the previous separation of the waters? The same film, run in reverse, of course.

Slow Poison for the Watchdog

BILLY ROSE

The Cook Has A Chauffeur

I know a Hollywood producer who earns 5,000 lovely American dollars each week. His mother works as a cook for a family in Pasadena for $35 a week and Thursdays off.

Is this producer a no-good so-and-so? No, he's a wise and kind-hearted gent. Here's the story.

Let's call the producer Peter Casnitz. That isn't his real name, but neither is the one he uses for screen credits. His family name—the one his mother hangs on to—is a mixture of Cs, Zs and Ys, pronounceable only by residents of a small village outside Budapest.

Peter was raised in the kill-or-cure incubator that is New York's East Side. When the wolf howled outside their tenement door, Peter's mom hit it over the head with a frying pan and made it into winter mittens. Like a lot of moms I used to know down there, this East Side pioneer woman taught her kids to love good things in an environment where good things were only a rumor.

And, brother, how Pete's mom could cook! Her children were patched and repatched on the outside, but inside they were the best-dressed kids in town.

THE CASNITZ family had a lot of tough years. Then Peter did what many East Siders—from Al Smith to George Gershwin—have done. He got behind himself and pushed.

First, he worked on a newspaper. Then he wrote some magazine pieces. Then a bum play. Then a pretty good play. Then a darn good play. Soon he needed knee-length pockets to hold his money.

Then Hollywood. Peter wrote money like the Chinese mint. To-day he's in the quarter-million-a-year class and owns a little stock in the company. His Belaire bungalow has a four-car garage, two hand-painted Renais, a Capehart, and—as some writer who only makes $2,000 a week once cracked—even the bathrooms have brasses. The servant set-up is such that an order from The Master passes through three flunkies before it gets to the one who carries it out.

And mom—she's been right there with him all the time—a little lost gal whose job had grown away from her.

One day Peter took a close look at his mother and got worried. She had thinned down almost to transparency. He called in one of those dollar-a-minute doctors. The medico tapped her all over, shrugged and told the producer to remember Mrs. Casnitz was a very old lady.

One morning the very old lady left the house shortly after day break. Said she was going shopping. When she got back late that night, her face was flushed. Peter heard her humming an old East Side song as she brushed out her hair.

IT DIDN'T TAKE one of Hollywood's best script minds long to figure out why his mother was home only on Thursday.

He faced her one night when she got home and said, "Admit it."

"I admit it," said his mom. "I'm back in the kitchen when I'm boss, and I feel fine. I know that in Hollywood a fancy producer like you can't have his mother mixed in with the servants. This way nobody knows, and I'm happy."

Did Pete make her quit? I said he was a wise and kind-hearted gent. She's still cooking for the family in Pasadena and boasted she's been promised a $5 raise the first of September. That will bring her salary to $20 a week less than that of the liveried chauffeur who picks her up around the corner from the Pasadena house each night at 8:30.

Won't Be Intimidated ---Not Much, That Is

I am in receipt of a billet-doux from my landlord.

If agreeable, he writes, my rent is to be raised, effective the day before yesterday.

It's been a long time since '76, but the spirit of the Minute Men still lives. The minute the President signed the rent decontrol bill, the landlords raised the rent.

Oh, it's all very voluntary, of course. I have my choice in the matter: I can either agree to the increase or adjust myself to life in a tree.

Jesse James, I should have said, where did you leave your horse? I thought you were a vegetarian. I should have said, and here you come wanting your pound of flesh. Did you have a big funeral when you buried your conscience? I should have said, and how can you raise my rent so easily when it's so hard for me to do?

You can't bluff me, I should have said. It's a free country. I'm a citizen. I know my rights.

OK, I said, where do I sign? . . .

GLADSTONE WILLIAMS

Truman's Prize Political Boner

WASHINGTON—In making a pleasing gesture to an old friend President Truman may well have pulled one of the prize political boners of all time.

The gesture concerns his act in recommending to the last Congress that it pass a new Presidential succession law making the Speaker of the House, in lieu of the Secretary of State, next in line for the White House in the event of the death or incapacity of both the President and Vice President.

At the time the recommendation was originally made the Democrats were in control of Congress and Rep. Sam Rayburn, of Texas, an old crony of the President's, was Speaker of the House. The gesture was aimed at Mr. Rayburn, from whose office Mr. Truman first got the summons to come to the White House after the death of President Roosevelt.

As a token of its esteem for Mr. Rayburn the Lower House passed the bill by a whopping majority at the last session. But nothing came of it in the Senate. There it was buried without the ceremony even of a formal hearing.

Consistent To be consistent Mr. Truman had to recommend the legislation again this session, although the situation has greatly changed since his original proposal was made. The difference is that the Republicans are now in control of Congress and a Republican, Rep. Joe Martin, of Massachusetts, is the Speaker of the House.

What gives the President's act the ingredients of a prize political boner is this fact of the Republicans holding the Speakership.

It means simply that if the bill goes through, as there is every indication it will, and anything should happen to Mr. Truman we would have a Republican President for the rest of the term.

As most Democrats see it, that is a pretty dangerous risk to take merely for the sake of consistency. The history of the nation for the next eight or nine years might easily turn on the consequences of the Truman act.

For if anything should happen to Mr. Truman and Speaker Martin should succeed to the Presidency he would be given an advantage, by virtue of holding the office, which would make it extremely difficult to defeat him either for the nomination or election.

GOP Stand The Republicans have seen all of this clearly enough. Hence, the solid Republican vote by which the bill passed the Senate last week. Having passed the House at the last session, there is no reason to suppose that the measure will not be approved there when it comes up for final consideration.

And President Truman having recommended it, he cannot well afford to veto it, although the members of his party in the Senate voted almost unanimously against it.

The political angle of the situation is reflected in the vote by which the Senate passed the bill. It is remarkable to point out that here is a piece of legislation recommended by the President which was almost unanimously opposed by members of his own party while being solidly supported by the Republicans.

Twist For those Senate Republicans who were so eager to put the bill through, the legislation could have an ironical twist. Consider what would happen, for example, if Speaker Martin should succeed to the Presidency before the next Republican National Convention meets. By almost every calculation he would be favored to win the nomination.

The effect of such a development would be to nullify all of the carefully laid plans of other more important contenders for the GOP nomination. Sen. Taft, Gov. Dewey, Sen. Vandenberg, Gov. Warren and all the rest would be left out in the cold.

Too Late? It still may not be too late for Mr. Truman to retrieve the situation. He would be charged with gross inconsistency, but he could very well veto the bill on the grounds that, while he himself favored the change, the sentiment of his party in Congress was so overwhelmingly against it that he did not feel free to go contrary to the party's wishes.

It would not be surprising to see influential party leaders urge this course on the President. The thing that gives it force is that with the new Presidential succession law now being put through a man of the great talents of Secretary of State Marshall would be substituted by Speaker Martin as next in line for the Presidency. On that issue the country would undoubtedly support a veto, and this can be said without any intended disparagement of Mr. Martin.

"Chiropractors adjourn convention"—News item.

As the seasons come and go Winter brings us ice and snow,
Then arrives the verdant Spring when the lovers have their fling.
With humidity and heat, Summer comes on lagging feet,
Autumn brings the brown and red foliage so soon to shed.

But despite the Summer heat, Spring's wet rains or Winter's sleet, There's a season permanent when conventioners convene—
All the year they congregate, mostly in some far-off State,
Where they sometimes spend a week hearing some dull speaker speak,
Playing, drinking without end, politicking for some friend
Who's an eager candidate to be the Pluper-Potentate.
Or listen while someone regales them with a talk for swelling sales.

Doctors, lodgemen, businessmen hold conventions now and then.
Brothers of fraternities meet and eat and bat the breeze.
Then they go their separate ways, tired, broke and in a daze.

But what do chiropractors do to help to put proceedings through?
Do they smoothly go along and never rub each other wrong?
Lie on a table and relax and pat each other on the backs?

'Take the Fort— But Leave My Pants'

FORT TICONDEROGA, N. Y.—This Department will from time to time conduct historical researches in the interest of its clients to round out their knowledge of important incidents in American history. This dispatch, for instance, is being prepared on the hallowed ground of the great Fort on the shores of Lake Champlain, a valuable piece of real estate which, in 1775, Ethan Allen and his Green Mountain Boys removed from the custody of the British by catching the commander of the strong point with his pants down.

You may feel that the above metaphor is a flippant vulgarism used to describe General Allen's noble deed of arms by which the Patriots gained control of the important waterway leading to Canada. It happens, however, to be the literal truth. So complete, his story tells us, was the surprise move of General Allen and his 83 Green Mountainers that Captain Delaplace, the British Commander in charge of George the Third's property at this heavily fortified spot, was so taken by the sight of the invaders that he forgot to pull up his pants.

HE THEN repaired up a stone step leading to the barracks where the commander lived and ordered him to come forth, and, according to General Allen's own account, "at which the captain came immediately to the door with his breeches in his hand, when I ordered him to deliver me the fort instantly, who asked me the best authority I demanded it. I answered, 'In the name of the great Jehovah and the Continental Congress.'"

MRS. DELAPLACE: (from the rear) What's the man saying? Is he selling something? I say, darling, do pull up your pants. You look most ridiculous standing out there in your pants.

CAPTAIN DELAPLACE: Dash it all, dear, I'm trying to, but the blighter keeps waving his sword at me. (to General Allen) Look here, old chap, this is most irregular, you know, a bit undignified and all that; can't we...
GENERAL ALLEN: (who was not noted for his sense of humor) In the cause of liberty against tyranny, I demand you surrender or I will sacrifice the whole garrison.

MRS. DELAPLACE: I declare, I don't know what's come over you, Captain Delaplace, standing there in that attire arguing with a stranger catching your death of cold. You come right back in here and pull up your...
CAPTAIN DELAPLACE: Be quiet, darling. What about getting some clothes on yourself? Oh, blast what a way to fight a war, (to General Allen) I say, old fellow, what about going out and coming in again? It just isn't done, you know, expecting an officer of his Majesty's. Twenty-sixth to fight without his... What did you say your name was?

GENERAL ALLEN: Allen, and I don't mean Fred. Surrender, or—
MRS. DELAPLACE: You come right back in here this minute and put on your pants.

CAPTAIN DELAPLACE: Oh, dash it all, Allen, take the ruddy fort, but lend me a hand with these breeches.

THE ALSOPS

Democrats Deeply Split

WASHINGTON—There is a good chance that next year, for the first time in recent American history, an incumbent American President will have to face a convention deeply split on the issue of his renomination. For the signs are that Harry Truman will have to run a gauntlet to which even Herbert Hoover, at the low point of his political popularity in 1932, was not subjected.

In a number of States the regular Democratic organization appears to be coming apart at the seams, making it probable that a considerable bloc of anti-Truman delegates will be in noisy attendance at the 1948 Democratic convention.

The process of coming apart at the seams is most clearly visible in California. There a loud, three-cornered row is in progress. In the middle is James Roosevelt, the late President's oldest son, and presently Chairman of the State Central Committee. On one side is Edwin Pauley, California National committeeman. On the other is the ebullient Robert W. Kenney, who lost his own party to Republican Gov. Earl Warren last Autumn. Kenney has loudly announced his intention of capturing the party for Henry Wallace next year.

THE SAME pattern holds elsewhere. In Oregon a pro-Wallace group called the Confederationists has captured the party machinery. The party organization is threatened in Washington, and there are pro-Wallace stirrings in Idaho, Colorado, and even in Illinois. New York, with its American Labor Party, certainly pro-Wallace, is a special case. Finally Minnesota too shows signs of turning sour on the regular Democratic organization.

In Minnesota the Democrats and the Farmer Labor Party have some what tentatively joined hands. Former Gov. Elmer Benson, a leading light in the pro-Wallace Progressive Citizens of America, is also a leader of the Farmer Labor Party. State Chairman Harold Barker, who holds some of the trump cards in the situation, is reported to be Benson and Wallace man. Thus the distinct possibility of a Wallace slate looms in Minnesota also.

One key to the situation is Hubert Humphrey, Mayor of Minneapolis. Humphrey is probably the most popular Democrat in the State. He is also a vice chairman of Americans for Democratic Action, the anti-Communist, anti-Wallace Liberal organization. Yet Humphrey was so pro-Wallace in 1944 that he held the Minnesota delegation for Wallace for Vice President to the bitter end. He is reported to have been disillusioned last Autumn when Wallace visited Minnesota.

ON THAT occasion Humphrey told Wallace that the Communists were heavily infiltrating the Democratic-Farmer-Labor organization. He appealed to Wallace to help get them out of his hair by roundly condemning them in a speech. Wallace was scheduled to make a speech at that time, but he was so busy with the matter of the Minneapolis strike that he was unable to do so.

Wallace then proceeded to do the usual stunt about "Red-baiting" in his speech. This futility so stunned Humphrey that he avoided Wallace on the latter's recent junket to Minnesota. Yet even if Humphrey holds firm, and fights the Wallace slate of delegates, the Minnesota position is by no means secure for the regular Democrats.

What all this adds up to, of course, is a sizable bloc of anti-Truman delegates at the Democratic convention in 1948. They cannot possibly hope to beat Truman. But they can march ostentatiously out of the convention amid loud cries of "Wallace for President," and proceed to set up a third party organization. In so doing, they will certainly succeed in wrecking the Democratic Party, at least temporarily. They will also succeed in electing the most stodgily conservative Congress in a great many years.

HAROLD MARTIN

Some Things Do Not Change

HONOLULU—Some things do not change, in war or peace. One is the look of the sea with the sun upon it when the trade winds are ruffling the blue into white caps. One is the lonesome squawking of the mynah birds as they hop about on the grass beneath the palm trees early in the morning. And another is the havoc a Navy laundry can wreak upon a man's clothes. I think they have a battalion of trained chimpanzees over there. Some of them are equipped with hammers, for breaking off buttons. Others, the largest, strongest and most vicious, are used for tearing the sleeves out of shirts.

I come in from down South with my bag full of dirty khaki and I feel very happy as I send the big bulging laundry bag out in care of the Filipino who looks after the rooms at BOQ. He takes it out and stows it in a closet down the hall and forgets all about it for three days.

Service Finally, after much shouting and hollering on everybody's part, it is located and sent out—at a one-day rate, because I am shoving off, which makes it cost 50 percent extra. So it comes back this morning and what happens? Three shirts are gone entirely. I think the chimpanzees wore them home. All the buttons are off the shorts, so that they cannot be worn, and the coat to the seersucker suit, which is the only suit I possess on this trip, has a rip in it from collar to tail which a female chimpanzee who never took a sewing lesson in her life has sewn up with binder twine. In addition, the bill comes to $1.28, and when I total it up they have overcharged me 47 cents. I have just come back from speaking to the laundry man about these matters and I think his whole attitude toward life has been changed. He was a humble and a broken man when I left him.

But he has got my coat, and the papers, which must be filled out in triplicate, in which I seek to collect damages for one suit, seersucker, destroyed. There will be great conferring, and passing of the buck, and filling out of forms, and when I get back in here five or six months from now I will find that the case has been sent to Washington for review by higher authority, probably the Chief of Naval operations. I do not think I will ever get the price of the coat back, but my son, or my grandson may get some adjustment on it in their generation.

Same Way I apologize for being bitter at this point, but I was hoping that peace had brought about a reform of the laundry situation. I was hoping that the button crushers had been sold as surplus to gentlemen in the rock-scrubbing business, and I am sure some civilian industry must have use for the acid which they use in dissolving the fibers of seersucker suits. It is a matter that should be looked into by the United Nations. However, I will feel better in an hour, for at that time I will be in the air, on the way to Guam, and no man flying in the beauty of cloud and sunshine that exists over the Pacific on a bright day can stay mad at anybody very long.

CHANNING COPE

Can Any Soil Be All Bad?

Has anyone ever called attention to the four-acre patch of kudzu on the highway South of Covington on the way to Jackson? If not, let's hasten to do so for it is making history. More than making history, it may be even confounding the entire science of geology. Certainly this little patch is unlike like it are changing our conception of the soil here and there.

Here are the facts. Some years ago the owners of this piece of land sold the upper 36 inches of the soil to the Highway Department of Georgia for road building. Prior to the sale, this four-acre patch had been farmed to cotton for a great many years. It is the type of land which would be called "Class 3" by the soil conservationists, being fairly steep in slope and pretty well worn out. There wasn't much life left in this piece of dirt when the upper strata was sold. And let's remember that 36 inches were removed and hauled away. Then kudzu was planted in this barren subsoil.

I WISH you could see the patch now! It is completely covered with the heavy, deep green mat of vines, stems and leaves which kudzu supplies so wonderfully. It is even running up the electric light pole just for good measure. And, mind you, the fertilizer treatment of the plot was nothing to brag about. It was given a start at planting time with a minimum of phosphate and four years later was given a liberal application of the same material. And it is now luxuriant.

Well, what is there unusual about this? Anyone knows that kudzu will grow on poor soil. Why all the fuss? Well, for one thing, we have been thinking in terms of top soil. We have been told, and it is unquestionably true, that Nature makes 1 inch of top soil to make an inch of top soil. The rain falls and the wind blows and there is a grinding away of the rocks and topsoil is manufactured.

SO FAR, so good. But this patch on the Covington-Jackson highway poses the question: Is it topsoil we need? If kudzu will grow in subsoil, why worry about topsoil? The answer is that we need other crops than kudzu. Newcomers there and finding plenty of topsoil, this opens up a whole new field of thought. For instance, how long will it take kudzu to make an inch of topsoil? Is it true or not that our abused red clay soil has something down there within itself that is capable of self-healing, of being restored easily?

ROBERT QUILLEN

The Issue Is Drawn

Always in the past, when the American people have faced some soul-testing ordeal, they have set their teeth in it and grimly hung on until the thing was finished.

Now we face another ordeal that will test our courage and unselfishness and patriotism to the utmost, year after year — not through any fault of our own, but because of things that are forced upon us.

THE RUSSIANS, by their own confession, are waging endless but undeclared war upon "capitalism," and they are determined to force their system upon the world.

Since war justifies many things that are crimes in time of peace, they make use of every evil device that will serve their cause. They pay lip service to honesty and honor to gain an advantage, but do not hesitate to be dishonest or to profit by dishonesty. The record is filled with evidence of their trickery and bad faith.

They never intended to play a sincere role in UN. They have violated the letter and spirit of it almost from the beginning. They will support it so long as it serves them, but not one moment longer. Their only interest is Russia.

We know that other lands must have prosperity, freedom and security, or the world can have no assurance of peace.

Thus the issue is clearly drawn.

WE MUST somehow persuade other lands to see the truth. We must persuade leaders to do their part—their utmost best—to co-operate with us to save their country. We at home must work together, without tiring or thought of quitting, regardless of cost, like patriots in time of war.

For the plan of the Russians is now clear. They have no fear of us, for they know we will not attack them. They will not invite war, but they will do everything short of war to injure us and dominate others.

Their agents, working secretly or openly, have organized the workers in every civilized land, and they have the power to call strikes that would stop key production and bring economic chaos in any weaker land.

Russia's role is to wreck and destroy until Europe's hungry, helpless, desperate people turn to Moscow for help that will mean slavery.

Our role is to prevent that horror—to make men free and prosperous. We dare not quit; for if we lose, the world belongs to Russia.

Our childish faith in Russian honor has already cost us much. Unless we awake quickly, and do our utmost to save human freedom, our liberty cannot survive. One nation cannot stay free if all others obey a master.

FINNEY HOSPITAL (Quitman Free Press.)

Thomasville cannot understand why Finney Hospital is closed and millions spent to build a veterans' hospital in Tallahassee. One reason given is at present there is not enough nurses and doctors to operate it. Who will operate one in Tallahassee? Another reason is given by Chief Medical Officer Rawley of the VA that there is a dearth of social and recreational facilities in Thomasville. To the taxpayer who often has a considerable dearth of social and recreational facilities that is plain topsoil we need.

Thomasville, which has done very well with winter residents coming there and finding plenty of recreation, is at the boiling point. It is a matter of coexistence, how long will it take kudzu to make an inch of topsoil? Is it true or not that our abused red clay soil has something down there within itself that is capable of self-healing, of being restored easily?

THOMAS L. STOKES

Floods Argue For MVA Project

WASHINGTON—The rampaging Missouri and Mississippi and their tributaries are not only sweeping over the levees in their path but are slopping over in little rivulets that figuratively are seeping into the consciousness and consciences of this capital.

As pointed out here a few days ago, what is happening in the Middle West shows the need to do the job, once and for all. It would be done through the comprehensive, all-purpose plan for flood control, power development, irrigation and navigation that is embodied in the proposed Missouri Valley Authority, as it was done for another large area of our country through TVA.

Such an all-purpose program, which was envisioned many years ago by President Theodore Roosevelt for the Missouri as well as other watersheds, was submitted to Congress three years ago in the MVA plan by another Roosevelt—Franklin D. There it slumbers.

THE MISSOURI River is lapping at the levees of neglect and indifference erected here by selfish private interests. Among others, they include utility interests. As well as resisting MVA, the utility interests are trying to build another levee against proper development of our river resources in still another sector here, the House Interstate Commerce Committee. This is related to the general problem involved not only in the Missouri but in other rivers which need proper development to prevent floods and for other beneficial purposes, including cheap power.

It seems timely to re-emphasize the threat revealed here previously to integrated development of water resources that is contained in two bills sponsored by Rep. William Miller, Republican, Connecticut, which the utilities are trying to slip through Congress in a hurry. These measures would well-nigh destroy the regulatory authority of the long-established Federal Power Commission.

Police Pursue Taxi Ride Clue In Death Case

The East Lake section was the focal point Wednesday of the police probe into the week-old slaying of pretty Mrs. Jeanette Reymann, the Bogart housewife, who died at the hands of a sex-slayer while on a shopping tour in Atlanta.

Det. Lt. Coppenger, who is directing the investigation of the baffling slaying, said that he will reinterview a taxicab driver who reported that he had picked up a man answering the description of the "stockily-built" man who was seen leaving the Reymann death truck after parking it.

The cab driver said that the rider boarded his cab at the intersection of Moreland Avenue and Memorial Drive, S. E., shortly after the slaying, and asked to be taken to East Lake. The man got out at an intersection after the cab fare had reached a dollar, according to the driver.

Detectives hoped that the investigation of this fact of the case might lead to the whereabouts of the killer.

Meanwhile, a scientific examination of particles found on the car as covering in which the battered body of Mrs. Reymann was found revealed strands of her hair and samples of dirt which might help in locating the spot where Mrs. Reymann was slain.

Police pointed out that the dirt could be matched against that of suspect locations and thus the scene of the crime ascertained.

Still other possible clues were being examined. A pair of trousers, believed blood-stained, and a shirt, both of which were found Tuesday in a wooded plot off Pryor Road, are being scientifically analyzed.

Scientist Parries Blast Defense In Overell Trial

SANTA ANA, Calif., July 2.—(AP)—Prosecution Pathologists parried defense attempts Wednesday to show that Dr. E. Overell, a Santa Ana physician, was not the author of a dynamite blast which splintered the galley of his yacht, rather than from bludgeoning with blunt instruments.

Atty. Otto Jacobs, representing Louis Overell, 18-year-old only child of the dead socialites, won from Dr. John J. Montanus, former Orange County autopsy surgeon, such an opinion Tuesday.

But Dr. Eustace Benjamin, professor here and in Chicago, Navy veteran and researcher, testified Wednesday on cross-examination that both sides of the heads of both victims showed "definite impressions from the jimpingment on the scalp of some foreign objects."

Dr. Charles W. Decker, of Pomona, a surgeon for 40 years, a graduate of St. Louis University, the University of Southern California and California, a Medical Corps colonel during the war and a lecturer on surgery, declared:

"Four peculiar wounds were discovered in the area of Mr. Overell's temples. They were raised in the center." He expressed the opinion that they probably were "inflicted by an object hollow in the center." He said the outer diameter of the ring was one inch, the inner three-quarters of an inch.

The trial of Louise and her boy friend, George Gollum, 21-year-old pre-medical student, is now in its sixth week. Interest continues high in this County Seat, and despite the summer heat, the court is waiting entrance to the courthouse Wednesday an hour before the trial was almost a block long.

Northsiders Face Trials After Fight

E. H. Peters, of 926 East Rock Springs Rd., and Dr. William C. Warren, of 980 Briarcliff Rd., face trials in the Criminal Court of Fulton County as the result of a fight police said they had Monday night on Sheridan Dr. Both are under $200 bond.

Fulton County police reported the fight started when Peters struck a knife into a tire of Warren's automobile after Warren drove off with Mrs. Rosa Taylor, identified as Peters' former wife. Police arrested Dr. Warren on charges of being drunk and disorderly on a public highway and assault and battery. Peters was arrested on charges of assault and battery and malicious mischief.

Vocational Training Advances in State

Georgia has risen from fifth to fourth place among the States in a comparison of persons enrolled in Federally-aided vocational schools, Dr. M. D. Mobley, State Director of Vocational Education, said Wednesday.

California ranks first with Texas, New York and Georgia following. Dr. Mobley reported, "Georgia has probably the lowest per capita cost in vocational education in the country," Dr. Mobley said. "This cost and the State's position indicate that we are getting full value in vocational education."

This break-front bookcase in the Sheraton manner is an English reproduction by Frederick Tibbenham, Ltd. Made of beautifully matched crotch mahogany, the piece is scaled down a little from its original majesty not to overwhelm modern rooms. Herbert Cescinsky, architect and furniture expert, who has lectured at the Metropolitan Museum in New York, gives the reproductions produced by Tibbenham top billing for both their design and their details. We don't recommend the bookcase for first apartments or budget pocketbooks for its surely belongs to suave settings and owners with museum tastes.

ELIZABETH WOODWARD SAYS:

You Ask the Questions: I'll Try To Answer Them

DEAR MISS WOODWARD: "About five months ago I was going steady with this boy. Before he had another girl, but he left her to go with me and we were very serious about each other. But after a while that other girl started being friendly with my boy friend, so he left me and started going with her. Now he wants to come back to me. He told me if I'd have him back, he'd never leave me again. Do you think he really means it?"

He probably thinks he means it. But it wouldn't pay to lay much stock in such a promise. But why bother tying him up with pledges to be true? He'll be true to you only as long as it suits him to be, regardless of his assurances of undying devotion. So make hay while the sun shines! Have fun with him while he's willing to devote himself to taking you out. His interest may wane after a bit. But then... so might yours!

TIT FOR TAT

DEAR MISS WOODWARD: "My boy friend and I have been going together for months. But lately he's taken to going out with other girls. I got mad at that and started going with other boys. That made him furious. He says I'm not supposed to go with anybody else. But he goes with other girls. What should I do?"

What's the sauce for the gander, is also sauce for the goose. I always say, If your boy friend is going to take other girls out occasionally, he has no earthly reason to object to your varying your date diet too. If he can't see it that way... you'd better stop considering him your boy friend. Mind him when he asks you... but don't, even in the back of your mind, pretend that you belong together.

INDIAN GIVER?

DEAR MISS WOODWARD: "If a boy and girl like each other and they go out together quite a bit, and he gives her his class ring, then a long time after that she decides she's not going to go with him any more, is it all right for him to ask for his ring back? I'm afraid to give this girl my class ring for fear she won't give it back!"

You take a chance when you give your class ring to a girl. She may turn out to be the stuffy kind that collects class rings as souvenirs. She may want to keep yours as a reminder of you if and when you stop going together. If your ring matters a lot to you, you'd better hang on to it. But if you do weaken and give it to the girl you like best... you have a perfect right to ask for it back at any time. And she ought to want to give it back!

A FAIR CHANCE

DEAR MISS WOODWARD: "My brother used to go with the girl next door who is just like a sister to me. He got married to another girl. I still feel that the girl next door is just like a sister. Do you think it could develop into a romance?"

It's possible. Since you've known each other for ages and have seen each other a lot, you probably treat each other like the family. But you might start treating her as someone special. Don't take her for granted... don't be casual... try flirting with her a bit. Make her realize you really aren't one of the family!

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

HEARING IMPROVED

I read a report from a lady who said she had recovered her hearing after doing the special exercises described in your pamphlet on Tinnitus and Deafness. My husband, discharged from the Navy after losing 55 percent of hearing in left ear, wants to try the exercises. Navy doctor recommended removal of tonsils just to see.

Answer—They have 'em in the Navy too. If tonsils or adenoids obstruct throat or pharynx or orifice of Eustachian tube on the deaf side, it should be removed. Otherwise, there will be no reply for pamphlet on Deafness and Tinnitus (head noises) send stamped self-addressed envelope.

WHAT? REAL WHOLE WHEAT?

We tried many stores but none had Plain Whole Wheat. Finally after doing the special exercises I called a feed store and they said they had whole wheat at 5 cents a pound. Must we get a grinder in order to use such whole wheat? (D. G.)

Answer—Apparently you sought some special brand or package. Well, I don't wonder. Even a feed store man seemed reluctant to sell me some plain wheat out of a large sack. Send stamped envelope bearing your address and ask in writing (if you use a clipping service, don't forget to include it) for "Wheat to Eat" which gives practical suggestions on the use of plain wheat in the everyday diet.

LOUELLA PARSONS REPORTS:

Sports Story Will Team Ava Gardner, Bob Taylor

HOLLYWOOD, July 2.—(INS)—Ava Gardner is dazzlingly beautiful in "The Hucksters," but more important, she stands on her own two feet as an actress with such seasoned players as Clark Gable, Deborah Kerr, Adolph Menjou and Sidney Greenstreet.

Louis B. Mayer has signed her on a new contract and given her starring billing with Robert Taylor in "This Is Love."

Sam Marx, the producer, is now lining up champions in the various sports world, for this picture is a story of sports. He is trying to get Joe Louis, Pauline Betz, Babe Didrikson and others.

Ava has always felt she never had a chance while she was Mrs. Mickey Rooney—well, the way it looks now, she will soon be battling even or ahead of her ex-husband.

Hearing that Virginia Bruce plays Gail Russell's mother in "Night Has A Thousand Eyes" made me pause to think how fast time slips by. It was 17 years ago that Virginia first came last. She was the first job she had with Paramount.

What a lot has happened to Virginia in those years—so much of it tragic. Her first marriage was to the charming but temperamental John Gilbert. While life with him was not easy, she loved him very much.

Unhappiness struck again when her second husband, J. Walter Rubin, the director, died after just a brief illness.

But Virginia has always kept her chin up and been a wonderful mother to her two children. Now she has found happiness again with Al Arap.

When Marie Wilson eloped six years ago with Alan Nixon and begged me not to print it, I didn't think the marriage would last. She was so hysterical and unhappy over her broken romance with Nickie Grinde, the director. Well, it's lasted. Marie and Alan are mighty happy.

This week they celebrated their anniversary, and at the same time will go into "Linda Be Good" for Matty Kemp. This is the first time they have played in the same picture since Alan wooed and won the pretty Marie.

On the air field in Copenhagen, where Grace Moore so tragically lost her life when the plane crashed last winter, a valuable jeweled trinket with the Norwegian King Haakon VII's initials was found.

The inspector of the airfield, Arthur Dahl, went to Oslo with the trinket and the King identified it and said he had given it to Grace Moore when he was in America.

Beverly Bayne looks just as young as Gloria Swanson does, and that's an accomplishment, believe you me.

Beverly writes that she's going into "The Naked City," the Mark Hellinger picture being made in New York. She plays Mrs. Lawrence Stoneman.

When I talked with Garson Kanin, and asked him if he and his wife, Ruth Gordon had written a comedy for Claudette Colbert, he laughed.

"We had a marvelous idea for Miss Colbert," he said. "We haven't put it on paper yet, but we have it outlined. We called it 'Trouble with Women' but Paramount has just made a picture with that name so we must find a new title. However, I think we have a cute idea, and we hope to make it."

Well, with Garson at Universal-International it shouldn't be too difficult to get Claudette, who makes many of her pictures for Bill Goetz.

Rehearing in Athens Case

The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals this week unanimously denied a petition involving $150,000 in back pay for rehearing of a case brought by the National Labor Relations Board against the Athens Manufacturing Company at Athens, Kenneth Douthett, Textile Workers' Union of America (CIO), announced here Wednesday.

The Court in May upheld NLRB findings that the Company's refusal to bargain had caused the 18-month-old strike. Douthett, adding he had asked Abit Nix, Secretary of the Company, to reinstate workers not already rehired. Douthett reported contract negotiations with the firm had been resumed.

SCOUTING DREAM

Bert Adams Offers Tops In Camping

By ANN WOOD

Camp Bert Adams, near Vinings, is a free and easy sort of place where a boy can relax and do pretty much as he pleases.

It's for Boy Scouts, and campers come with their own troops and scoutmasters, and take over a camp site. There, they can cook all of their own meals, or they can eat in the mess hall.

The Future Citizens Fund, to which Atlantans contributed $85,000 last year, had made the Camp a dream come true for troops.

All the cabins were remodeled into miniature dining halls and kitchens for troops. Platforms are available for seven-by-seven walls to accommodate two boys each.

Take Troop 163, of Decatur, which has firmly established itself for two weeks. Under the leadership of Scoutmaster W. B. Owens, the boys are cooking all their own meals. Scoutmaster Owens' mother prepared the menus for the meals, wrote out all recipes, and the amount of groceries to be ordered for each meal.

At another camp site, Troop 238 bedded down. However, all its members eat at the central mess hall, which has been completely renovated by money from the Future Citizens Fund. The kitchen has been worked over until it now will meet the most rigid health and safety tests.

Clear, tested water, flows through a new filtering plant into the swimming pool which lies beneath two steep mountains. The level of water in the boiling lake is being raised three feet.

Camp Bert Adams, with a lifted camp, prides itself on its relaxed atmosphere.

"We only have four bugle calls here," says Director Paul Runge, "and those are reveille, taps, mess and swim."

Low-Grade Fruit Casts Gloom Over Peach Belt

Constitution State News Service.
MARSHALLVILLE, July 3.—Georgia peaches are coming in and ordinarily that signals a gay time, but not this year. The reason is that the fruit is coming in wormy and under-sized and about a month late to boot.

That means less money in growers' pockets—about $7,000,000 less, to be more specific. For the growers had gone to the expense of planning and cultivating what was expected to be a record crop—some 12,000 to 15,000 carloads of the fruit for shipment to peach-loving populations in the East and Middle West.

But early shipments presage only a crop of 7,000 cars at best. "The crop looks about 50 percent off at present, but we hope that it will show a recovery as the season progresses," declared one of the big shippers in this area.

What played havoc with the crop is the late Spring cold weather that hung on for so long retarded budding and peach blossoms didn't appear until a month after their scheduled debut. That played into the hands of worms and naturally cut down on the size of the peaches.

Many of the peaches are being dumped and left to rot or fed to the hogs. Just too small or too wormy to measure up to Federal marketing regulations.

What peaches are being shipped, however, are holding up fairly well in shipment and the price isn't disappointing, the growers say. Currently the price for early hauls is running around $3 per bushel, which would bring a fair return to the grower were his yield up to expectations.

Linder Urges Growers Not To Sell Cull Peaches

Commissioner of Agriculture Tom Linder charged Wednesday that Georgia cities are not receiving good quality peaches because the grower is selling culls and undesirable fruit to trucks. "This is a practice that should be entirely discontinued," Linder said, and warned that immature and wormy peaches will be destroyed.

He said that the grower should be getting a fair return for his product. "If the grower is not getting a fair return, he will not produce a good crop," Linder said. "The grower must be able to get a fair return for his product, or he will not produce a good crop."

Fund for Clark's Hill Upheld by House Vote

By LORRAINE NELSON.

WASHINGTON, July 2—The House Wednesday defeated an attempt by Rep. Earl Wilson, Republican, Indiana, to halt Government construction of the Clark's Hill Dam, near Augusta, on the Savannah River, and turn the development over to private power interests.

After rejecting a Wilson amendment to the War Department's bill which would have deleted funds for Clark's Hill, the House went on to pass the measure by voice vote. It now goes to the Senate.

As approved, the bill appropriates $1,481,000 for Clark's Hill; $6,572,000 for the Allatoona reservoir on the Etowah River; $100,000 for continuing the deepening of Savannah harbor; and about $225,000 for overall planning of the Chattahoochee-Flint-Apalachicola waterway.

Earlier, the House rejected an amendment by Rep. Stephen Pace, of the Third Georgia District, which would have included in the War Department's Civil Functions Appropriation Bill a sum of $3,000,000 for initial construction of the Junction Dam, a part of the proposed inland waterway development on the Chattahoochee-Flint-Apalachicola Rivers.

Republicans lined up solidly against the Pace amendment and defeated it on a standing vote, 106 to 52. Only about five Democrats voted against it. The House Appropriations Committee also had denied the fund sought by Pace, but provided about $225,000 for overall planning of the waterway development.

Supporters of the Chattahoochee-Flint-Apalachicola waterway expressed hope Wednesday night that the Senate might approve $3,000,000 to permit start of its construction this year.

Pace and Rep. Andrews, Democrat, Alabama, said that Senators from Alabama, Florida and Georgia have pledged "co-operation" in attempting to get the Senate to write a $3,000,000 outlay into the War Department Bill.

The defeated House amendment, which would have ended Government work on the Clark's Hill Dam, proposed to take out of the Bill the $1,481,000 recommended by the Appropriations Committee for the project in 1948. The amendment was defeated by voice vote, strongly weighed on the side of those voting against it.

The Indianan said there was "no justification for Government construction of the dam since private enterprise, the Savannah River Electric Company, is ready, willing, anxious and able to build the dam and reimburse the Government for what it already has spent."

He told the House a vote against his amendment would be "a vote for national socialism."

Rep. Paul Brown, of the Tenth Georgia District, related the history of the Clark's Hill project, pointing out that the Georgia Power Company, of which the Savannah River Electric Company is an affiliate, had a license to build the dam, but gave it up and later supported public development of the site.

He said Commonwealth and Southern, a New York holding concern which controls the Georgia Power Company, "picked Wilson to take up this fight on the floor."

Meanwhile, a report that Army engineers and the Savannah River Electric Company had agreed upon joint construction of Clark's Hill Dam lacked confirmation here and in Atlanta.

Rep. Dondero, Republican, Michigan, said in Washington such an agreement had been reached. Charles A. Collier, Vice President of the Company and of the Georgia Power Company, said progress toward an agreement had been made during the past month. Col-

THIS IS WHEAT—AND IT'S NOT HAY

COLBY, Kan., July 2—(INS)—John Kriss, 42-year-old Colby farmer, prepared Wednesday to start harvesting a $2,000,000 crop of wheat.

Kriss has 50,000 acres of wheat ripening and he figured they would yield at least 1,000,000 bushels. If no storms interfere to damage his crop, he figured it would be worth $2,000,000.

He has the crop insured for $2,022,000.

He added: "Perhaps Mr. Dondero has more recent information on the matter than I."

In Savannah, Charles D. Russell, attorney for the Government, declared he knew of no new developments in the Savannah River project. The Government has appropriated more than $5,000,000 for the dam and has started construction. The Company recently asked permission to build the dam and repay the Government for money it spent.

Dondero, Chairman of the House Public Works Committee, told a reporter a bill he had proposed would make it legal for the Government and the Company to jointly undertake the power and flood control project.

Truman Refuses To Act In Plans for Finney

By LORRAINE NELSON.

WASHINGTON, July 2—President Truman has refused to intervene in the plans of the Veterans' Administration to close Finney General Hospital, at Thomasville, and to build a new hospital at Tallahassee, Fla., 30 miles south of Thomasville.

S. C. Personnel Shuffled In Clark's Hill Authority

COLUMBIA, S. C., July 2—(INS)—Speculation over changes in the membership of South Carolina's Clark's Hill Authority raged in Columbia Wednesday when Gov. J. Strom Thurmond told newsmen he had suggested that the Chairman resign. Two other members of the Authority resigned Tuesday, and one was immediately replaced by the Governor.

Wednesday the Governor said he had "suggested" that State Sen. Edgar A. Brown withdraw as Authority Chairman.

Brown denied that he had been asked to resign.

State Rep. J. Morrison Tuten, of Hampton, S. C., another member of the Authority, told newsmen Wednesday he would "resign in time, naturally."

Bombs Fall on Maryland Fishing Village

EASTON, Md., July 2—(UP)—A high-flying, unidentified plane dropped two small bombs on the small fishing village of Wittman near here Wednesday, wrecking a boat and slightly injuring its owner and his son.

State Police investigated immediately and found evidence indicating the bombs accidentally tore loose from the plane.

The bombs, loaded with test charges, were described as weighing between 50 and 100 pounds. Parts of one were found with portions of a shack that had held it to the plane.

One bomb landed in an open field and did no damage. But the other fell in a boatyard owned by J. Walter Jones, wrecking a part of his main shop and demolishing a small boat.

Jones and his son, Edwin, were knocked unconscious by flying debris. Neither was seriously hurt, however.

"Richard opened the door," Constitution Want Ads found a buyer for the place.

In his letter to Sen. Russell, the President said he had reviewed the decision and had decided not to countermand it.

AUNT HET

Law is funny. In the State where Ella lives, they jail you for registerin' at hotels under a false name, but they never bother radio and movie stars that do it.

Solve Housing Problem

FALLS CITY, Neb.—(INS)—Here is a way to beat the housing shortage. Southeastern Nebraska farmers report they can not find enough men to aid in the food production business. Richardson County Agent, Tom Aitken, discloses that married farm hands receive an average of $100 a month plus a house and garden plot and other extras as needed. This makes a farm job very attractive from the standpoint of earnings by comparison with city labor where food and rent are expensive items.

Squirrels Evicted

E. L. K. I. N. S., W. Va.—(UPI)—Sounds from the attic of a house here suggested that a nest of rats had taken over. Conservation Officer Wayne Stalnaker investigated, and found a mother squirrel and five offspring, which were evicted.
